PEIPING REFUSES TO ACCEPT 1914 BORDER OF INDIA, OTHER NEIGHBORS

Letters Made Public by Nehru Show Red China Considers Boundaries Subject to 'Survey.'

NEW DELHI, Sept. 8.—A collection of progressively acrimonious correspondence between India and Communist China over the last five years was submitted to the Indian parliament yesterday by Premier Nehru. It revealed steadily deteriorating relations between New Delhi and Peking over a variety of issues from 1954 to the present.

Documents from the Chinese side disclosed that the Peiping government no longer accepts the generally recognized borders separating Red China from neighboring countries, including India. The Peiping Foreign Office indicated in several notes that it considers these boundaries to be subject to "survey" and consultation with the "countries concerned."

Premier Chou En-lai, in a letter to Nehru dated last Jan. 23, specifically repudiated the so-called McMahon line which has been taken as the boundary between India and Tibet along the crest of the high Himalaya range since 1914. Chou said this delimitation of the frontier was a "product of the British policy of aggression against the Tibet region of China."

India's Argument. Nehru, in his reply dated March 22, advanced detailed argument for the validity of the McMahon line on principles of tradition, geography and international agreement. He implied in polite language that Chou had gone back on former assurances that this border delimitation was satisfactory to Peiping.

Charges and countercharges of border violations by both sides along the McMahon line—which runs from eastern Bhutan, an Indian protected state, to western Burma—and also on frontiers of the Indian territories of Ladakh, Uttar Pradesh state and the Northeast Frontier Agency, formed the bulk of the 122-page white paper.

The documents also dealt with disturbances in Tibet and the position of Indians there, activities of the Dalai Lama and other Tibetans exiled in India, jurisdictional disputes over villages in Bhutan and intrusions by aircraft over each other's territory.

The recital of disputes begins with a Chinese note of July 17, 1954, protesting that more than 30 armed Indian troops were in possession of Chinese territory at "Wu-je of the Ali area of the Tibet region of China."

It took New Delhi a year, while protests and denials flowed back and forth, to find out what Wu-je was. Eventually it was discovered to be the place that Indians call Bara Hoti.

It was another full year before the Indian government determined exactly where Bara Hoti was. The place was finally pinpointed as a small border outpost just south of Junjun pass, which India regarded as marking the frontier with China in the Garhwal district of Uttar Pradesh state.

Road Through Ladakh. On Oct. 18, 1958, New Delhi handed the Chinese ambassador a politely remonstrative letter announcing the discovery that the Chinese had finished a road more than a year before through a corner of Ladakh.

The Chinese in the area, according to the Indians, had arrested "an Indian party consisting of three military officers together with one guide, one porter, six pony owners and four soldiers" who were on a "normal patrol."

The Indian party was held nearly five weeks. It further incensed the Indian foreign ministry that when the Indians were finally "deported," as the Chinese put it, it was in late October with the prospect of a bitter crossing of the snow-filled Karakoram pass.

Indian Accusation. India reacted in a note of Aug. 28 by accusing a Chinese troop detachment of opening fire on an Indian patrol south of Mig-yitun on the tribal agency border. The Chinese arrested all 12 Indians in the group, but eight escaped, New Delhi said.

About a week before this, India began to take seriously Chinese maps distributed for the last 10 years showing large parts of India as the territory of China.

In a note to Peiping on Aug. 21, India said these maps depicted as Chinese "four of the five divisions of India's Northeast Frontier Agency; some areas on the north of the state of Uttar Pradesh and large areas in eastern Ladakh."

"It appears that the entire Tashigong area of eastern Bhutan and a considerable slice of territory in northwest Bhutan have also been included as Chinese territory."

Premier Jigme Dorji of Bhutan arrived in New Delhi to take up with Nehru the Chinese claims to Bhutanese territory.

Dealing With Laotian Crisis in Words and Action

Majority a Question. Delegates not always friendly to American objectives added, however, that an additional consideration on the part of the United States delegation might have been a fear that a two-thirds majority of the General Assembly could not be obtained for sending a mission to Laos.

In his presentation of the resolution, Lodge declared that the U.N. "confronts an appeal that puts us to the test," a plea for assistance from a small nation threatened by "forces outside its own borders." Laos has asked assistance from the U.N. on the ground that Communist North Viet Nam troops are crossing its borders to aid rebels.

"Clearly we cannot ignore this appeal," Lodge said, adding that there was no doubt that Laos "believes that it has been the victim of aggression and that when the government of any member state, large or small, appeals to the Security Council, the council cannot turn a deaf ear."

Sobolev's Reply. In reply, Sobolev's said that the three-power Western resolution had been placed without cause on the council agenda "by no one," although Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld had called the agency's attention to communications from Laotian Premier Sananikone accusing Viet Nam of military incursions into Laos.

Sobolev said the government of Laos had destroyed political agreements made at Geneva in 1956 and 1957 establishing a commission to insure co-operation with border states, including North Viet Nam. The responsibility for the civil war in Laos rested with its own government, he said, and the Soviet Union would vote against (veto) any move such as the Western resolution to undermine the Geneva pacts.

The issues involved in the crisis in Laos, it appeared from Security Council debates and from conversations with knowledgeable diplomats, are far from simple. Lodge declared that "the United States believes that there is no doubt at all that aggression is being committed." He did not say clearly by whom, and cited as evidence only the fact that "the newspapers are full of it. It is common knowledge."

Sir Pierson Dixon, Great Britain's chief delegate, was even more cautious: "The Council is confronted with a deeply disturbed situation in Laos," he said. "No doubt it is possible to draw fine distinctions as to the nature and origins of this disturbance. It is notoriously difficult to define aggression or to be certain about the border line between civil strife and foreign interference."

Newspaper reports from Laos, referred to by Lodge, are full of contradictions. In his communication to Hammarskjöld last Friday, Khampan Panya, the Foreign Minister of Laos, identified North Viet Nam, which has a Communist government, as the aggressor against Laos. Other reports have identified the chief elements in the disturbance in Laos as of origin in that country, supplied from North Viet Nam.

North Viet Nam denies charges of aggression against Laos. In a communication to the Security Council yesterday, the government in making its denial of aggression accused the United States itself of intervening in Laos with "the perfidious intention of transforming Laos into an American military base."

supporting the anti-Communist government of Laos, with arms and other aid.

Soviet Delegate Polite. What struck United Nations delegates was the difference in tone between the North Viet Nam communication, bitter in its denunciation of the United States, and the speeches of Arkady Sobolev, chief Russian delegate, in the Security Council yesterday and early today.

Sobolev, though he fought tenaciously on the parliamentary points, was almost elaborately polite to Western delegates, particularly the United States delegate, Lodge. And Lodge, in turn, was as unusually polite to Sobolev.

The reason was obvious, observers said. Neither diplomat wished to disturb relationships between the two countries any more than necessary on the eve of the visit to the United States of Russian Premier Nikita Khrushchev.

KILLED MAN WHO BUMPED INTO HIM, TEEN-AGER SAYS

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (UPI)—A 17-year-old youth said today that he stabbed a man to death because the man "accidentally brushed against him on the street."

Ramiro Roman, who came here from Puerto Rico only three months ago, admitted the bumping was unintentional but said "it made me mad."

Police said Roman was walking with a girl in the Gramercy park section last night when Thomas Jordan, 28, walking in the opposite direction, brushed against him. Roman, police said, cursed Jordan and hit him with chunks of concrete. Then, waving the broken neck of a bottle he had grabbed from a trash can, he chased Jordan about four blocks. When he caught up with him, he plunged the jagged glass into Jordan's chest. Roman was charged with homicide.

TOP COAST GUARD OFFICERS CHIDED FOR FAMILY TRIP

Two Admirals Censured for Taking 6 Relatives on Flight to Europe.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (UPI)—R. Adm. James H. Hirschfield, assistant commandant of the Coast Guard, has been rebuked for taking six relatives along on a 28-day flying inspection trip to Europe.

Censured for approving the presence of nine civilians on the trip was V. Adm. Alfred C. Richmond, Coast Guard commandant. The rebukes were approved by Treasury Secretary Robert B. Anderson, who has jurisdiction over the Coast Guard in peace time.

The service's two top officers were reprimanded orally by Assistant Treasury Secretary A. Gilmore Flues, who investigated the trip on Anderson's orders after it was publicized by a newspaper columnist.

The Treasury said Hirschfield's June 18-19 July 16 trip was for legitimate purposes. It said taking the nine civilians along on the four-engine DC-4 plane was "an abuse of discretion" by both Hirschfield and Richmond.

Hirschfield was accompanied by his wife, a daughter, a son, a friend of the son, a brother, the brother's wife and a niece.

Four Coast Guard officers also made the trip, including R. Adm. Edward H. Thiele, Coast Guard engineer-in-chief, who took along his wife and daughter.

Hirschfield would not comment on the official Treasury criticism. He said the nine civilians were lodged and fed at their own expense and that the Coast Guard was reimbursed for box lunches eaten in flight.

Hirschfield or Thiele inspected 16 Coast Guard units in England, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, West Germany, France, Italy, Greece and other Mediterranean areas. Their families visited most but not all of these countries, Hirschfield said.

The Treasury said in a statement that "there was an improper and unwarranted inclusion of civilian passengers on the flight."

The Treasury said it would continue to approve use of Coast Guard transportation on a space available basis for dependents of Coast Guardsmen who are being reassigned or who are on leave.

"Any other passengers should be taken only when the propriety is beyond question," it said.

Christine was picked to represent Austria in the contest here with beauties from 14 other countries after the first Miss Austria was disqualified for being only 17 years old. Christine is the 19-year-old daughter of a Vienna hairdresser.

Britons Will Vote for New House of Commons on Oct. 8

Macmillan Sets Date After Conference With Queen—New Chamber to Meet Oct. 27.

LONDON, Sept. 8 (AP)—Prime Minister Macmillan today set Oct. 8 as the date for a national election.

Voters in 630 districts will decide who will represent them in a new House of Commons. If the Conservatives win a majority, Macmillan will remain as Prime Minister. Opposition leader Hugh Gaitskell will replace him if the Labor party triumphs.

The Liberal party and a few smaller political groups also will have candidates in the field. Macmillan announced the date after consultations with Queen Elizabeth II at Balmoral Castle in Scotland.

The old Parliament will be dissolved Sept. 18. The newly elected Parliament will open Oct. 27.

Macmillan's trip to Balmoral caused excitement through the country. Gaitskell, away on a visit to Russia with his foreign affairs chief, Aneurin Bevan, packed his bags for a dash home.

Public opinion pollsters predicted the Conservatives would win for a third term—something no other party in Britain has done this century. The Conservative's five-year mandate does not run out until May, but British governments are empowered to call elections any time they choose.

Several factors make next month a good time for Macmillan. The British economy is riding high. Macmillan has reaped prestige as a negotiator following his mission to Moscow and as a result of the forthcoming exchange of visits between President Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

The selection of the early October date means the toppling of the Labor party annual conference scheduled to start Oct. 5.

The present House of Commons has 340 Conservatives, 278 Laborites and six Liberals. Six places are vacant.

The Conservatives came to power in 1951 by ousting the Labor party, which had crushed Winston Churchill in the first postwar balloting. The Conservatives won again in an election held May 26, 1955.

KENNEDY DISOWNS 56-DAY-OLD STRIKE PART IN CURRENT NOW LONGEST OF U.A.W. INQUIRY STEEL INDUSTRY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (AP)—Robert F. Kennedy, Senate Rackets Committee counsel, today formally disowned any part of the committee's current investigation of the United Auto Workers, terming it "the worst situation I've ever seen."

Kennedy said testimony never fully checked for accuracy was going into the record. He called this "completely unfair... completely intolerable."

Senator Carl Curtis (Rep., Nebraska), who directed the preliminary inquiry for the committee's Republican members, retorted that the situation was unusual because "we had to do this one by ourselves."

Chairman John L. McClellan (Dem., Arkansas), interrupted to say: "It's a bad situation but I don't know any way to handle it but to go ahead."

The discussion came after the committee decided to ask the Justice Department to try to find out who lied under oath in the inquiry. McClellan made the decision after the UAW submitted sworn affidavits from individuals denying testimony by Jess F. Motsigner, a former UAW officer.

CUBA TO TRY U.S. PILOT

HAVANA, Cuba, Sept. 8 (UPI)—The government today set Sept. 29 as the date for the trial of Rafael del Pino, a naturalized American citizen, on charges of anti-government plotting.

Del Pino was arrested in July when his small plane crashed on a highway outside Havana in an attempted take-off. He was accused of transporting "counter-revolutionary elements" between Miami and Cuba.

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (UPI)—The steel strike today became the longest against the industry. There have been longer strikes against individual steel firms.

Today is the strike's fifty-sixth day. The longest industry-wide steel strike until now was the 1952 walkout that lasted 55 days.

Negotiators met for 45 minutes today and recessed until 10 a.m. Thursday when a new bargaining procedure will start. Twelve negotiating subcommittees, one for each of the major companies involved, will get down to work Thursday.

Meanwhile, at Washington, Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell held a half-hour conference with President Eisenhower on the steel strike. He indicated he merely hoped the President up to date on the situation.

An industry source estimated that the companies were losing $15,000,000 each day the strike continued—a total of $825,000,000 through Labor day.

3 EXPLOSIONS IN LITTLE ROCK, ONE AT SCHOOL BOARD BUILDING Structure Containing Private Offices of Mayor Damaged — Fire Chief's Station Wagon Wrecked.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Sept. 8 (UPI) — Explosions last night wrecked an unoccupied office in the Little Rock School Board building, damaged a building housing the private offices of the mayor and demolished the fire chief's city-owned station wagon. No one was hurt.

The blasts, on the eve of the opening of the city's grade and junior high schools, came minutes apart.

The first was in Fire Chief Gann Nalley's car, parked in front of his residence, at 10:20 p.m.

The second was at 10:53 at the modernistic building where Mayor Werner Knoop has his private construction firm offices.

The third was at the School Board office at 10:58.

Police Chief Gene Smith called all men to duty. He ordered lights turned on in all the city's school buildings for the rest of the night.

He ordered his men to check every drive-in theater in the city and examine all outgoing cars. He surrounded the city's four high schools with barriers and men. Police stopped and examined every car in the vicinity of the schools. No arrests were made.

Nalley said he and his wife were awakened by the explosion in his station wagon. Nalley drew criticism from some segregationists for turning fire hoses on the demonstrators marching on Central High School last month.

Mayor Knoop and most members of the School Board are considered moderates in their views on the controversial school integration problem.

Gov. Orval E. Faubus said the explosion incidents were "sickening and deplorable."

He attributed similar explosions in other parts of the country to federal efforts to "force something upon the people" to which they are opposed. If the cause is removed, he said, the explosions will not happen.

The Chamber of Commerce announced it would underwrite a $25,000 reward for information leading to arrest of the bombers.

Last night's bombings were the first violence in the city since two women threw tear gas bombs into the School Board building and broke up a board meeting two weeks ago.

Dollarway (Ark.) School Board Files Brief in St. Louis.

"Disastrous consequences would most surely arise" from admission of Negro children to the Dollarway (Ark.) School District high school, the United States Court of Appeals was told here today.

The Dollarway School Board, in a brief filed in advance of a hearing set for Sept. 21, told of "difficulty and strife" following federal court decisions pertaining to school integration in Little Rock, and appealed to the court to "give the people of Arkansas the opportunity to make a peaceful and lawful transition" in public school desegregation.

Opening of the Dollarway schools, near Pine Bluff, has been postponed until after the court hearing here. The district board appealed an order by United States District Judge Axel J. Beck of Elk Point, S.D., requiring admission of three Negroes to the all-white Dollarway High School.

Virginia Starts Integration in Two More Areas.

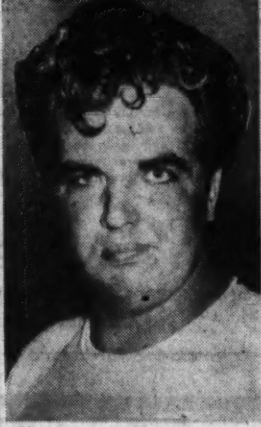

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 8 (AP) — Virginia's foot-dragging program of racial integration in public schools was extended to two more communities today without disorder.

At Front Royal more than 300 white children were on hand for registration with 21 Negro children. White parents had boycotted the 1000-pupil Warren County High School last term, leaving the entire facility to 21 Negro pupils.

BENZINE BUCKET EXPLODES; WOMAN SERIOUSLY BURNED

Mrs. Roy L. Horner, 8801 Scottsdale avenue, Jennings, was seriously burned yesterday when fumes from benzine she was using to clean paint brushes ignited.

Mrs. Horner was in the basement of her home cleaning the brushes in a plastic bucket, Jennings police said. The pilot light on the hot water heater ignited the fumes and the contents of the bucket exploded.

Her clothing caught fire and she suffered burns on 90 per cent of her body.

James Whitt, a nephew who lives next door at 8803 Scottsdale, heard the explosion and rushed to Mrs. Horner's basement. He threw a sheet around her to smother the flames. She was taken to Normandy Osteopathic Hospital.

SYMINGTON WILL ADDRESS HOME BUILDERS MEETING

United States Senator Stuart Symington (Dem.) of Missouri will be the principal speaker at the third annual National Executive Marketing Conference on Homebuilding, it was announced yesterday.

The conference will be held Sept. 24 and 25 at the Chase and Park Plaza Hotels. Theme of the meeting, sponsored by the National Housing Center, will be "The Next Decade in Homebuilding."

About 1000 home builders and manufacturers of home equipment and appliances are expected to attend the meeting. There will be panel discussions on home production, financing, marketing, legislation, research, technology, advertising and public relations.

$2633 GONE; ATTENDANT AT OIL STATION SOUGHT

A filling station attendant who disappeared shortly before $2633 was found to be missing from the station was being sought by police today.

County police said the attendant started work at the station at 9311 South Broadway, Lemay, a month ago. Early yesterday, he asked a customer to watch the station for a few minutes. The attendant got in his car and drove north in Broadway.

Police said that in addition to the money, $60 worth of cigarettes are missing.

MENTAL CHECK-UP FOR CHILD BEATER

John Kenneth McGhee was sent to Malcolm Bliss Hospital for observation today, after he appeared in police court.

He was charged with peace disturbance in connection with the severe beating of his 6-year-old son, Kenneth.

Judge Rodney Weiss ordered McGhee taken to the hospital. McGhee agreed that he should be examined, the judge said.

Assistant Circuit Attorney Robert Koster refused to issue a warrant against McGhee, who was arrested Saturday night after he admitted beating his son.

The warrant was refused, Koster said, because Mrs. McGhee said she would not prosecute her husband.

McGhee was arrested on the complaint of his wife, who told police she found her son with severe bruises and cuts of the back when she returned home from work Saturday.

McGhee, a roofer, told police he beat the youth as punishment for returning home late Friday from an errand.

The boy left the McGhee home at 3306A South Jefferson avenue at 11 a.m. Friday and did not come home until 10:15 p.m., the father said.

The father used a piece of lumber 18 inches long to beat the boy across the back, police said. Officers of the Lynch street station, where McGhee was booked, described the beating as the worst case they had ever seen.

Mrs. McGhee told police this was the second time this year her husband had beaten one of their children.

On the other occasion, he beat their 7-year-old daughter, Doris, when she came home from school for lunch. McGhee was fined $300 in police court for this beating.

In addition to Kenneth and Doris, the McGhees have three other children, 2, 4, and 5 years old. Mrs. McGhee is expecting a sixth child in several months.

Kenneth was treated at City Hospital Saturday night.

Koster quoted Mrs. McGhee as saying her husband has acted strangely at times since he was injured in a fall three years ago. She said she would arrange for her husband to be examined by a physician.

LAST OF TWAIN POLICEMEN SEE CONTRACTS TO BE LET NEXT MONTH

Expressway Work Had Been Held Up Pending U.S. Action on Gasoline Tax Hike.

Contracts for construction of the last sections of the Mark Twain Expressway in North St. Louis probably will be awarded by the Missouri State Highway Commission next month.

A spokesman for the commission said it hopes to be able to resume awarding contracts in October to continue Missouri's highway program.

The announcement followed Senate action on Saturday approving a bill to increase the federal gasoline tax from 3 to 4 cents a gallon to provide funds to continue the interstate highway program.

Resumption of bid lettings in Missouri next month will depend upon the speed of Congress in finally approving the gasoline tax increase and upon final determination of how much federal money will be made available to Missouri under the program, the commission spokesman said.

Postponed in July.

The commission postponed the awarding of contracts for highway construction in July, August, and September because of the congressional deadlock over financing of the interstate highway program.

Included in the postponed projects were the last two sections of the Mark Twain Expressway not yet placed under contract.

The sections are from Birchler boulevard and Davison avenue to Shreve avenue and from Shreve to Taylor avenue, an over-all distance of about two miles.

Total estimated cost of the two sections is $9,000,000.

$35,000,000 Behind.

Rex M. Whitton, chief engineer for the State Highway Department, disclosed recently that Missouri's highway program had fallen about $35,000,000 behind schedule as a result of the deadlock in Congress over financing the interstate system.

Under the bill passed by the Senate and returned to the House for concurrence in a number of amendments, the increased federal gasoline tax would remain in force for 21 months.

It is expected to yield an additional $333,000,000 for the highway trust fund in the nine-month period beginning Oct. 1 and $590,000,000 during the 12 months thereafter.

POLICEMEN SEE STOLEN SAFE IN AUTO, ARREST 3

Move In When Car Stops Nearby and They Hear Tools Being Used.

Three men were arrested in Fenton early today in connection with the theft of a safe in St. Louis several hours earlier.

The arrests were made after two off-duty St. Louis county policemen saw the safe in the trunk of a passing automobile.

Patrolmen Bob Williams and Jack Patty, who had gone off duty at 11 p.m., were chatting in the 200 block of Yarnell road when they saw a car go by with the trunk lid open.

The headlights of a following car disclosed what looked like a safe in the trunk. The cars stopped near a Meramec river club house several hundred feet away.

Shortly afterward, there were sounds of tools being applied to the safe, and the officers moved in.

Patty arrested one man standing by the safe outside the car. Two other men disappeared in nearby bushes but one of them was caught within a few minutes, hiding in the undergrowth.

Patty and Williams notified county police headquarters and other officers joined the search, setting up roadblocks at nearby intersections.

St. Louis police also were notified, since the safe was found to have been stolen from the Christmann Plywood Co., 4464 Duncan avenue.

Participating in the search for the third fugitive were St. Louis Patrolmen Robert Mueller and Vincent Manning of the Canine Corps, with their dogs, Prince III and Fanny.

The third man was arrested by County Patrolman Harry Beebe in a filling station on U.S. Highway 66 in Fenton.

He gave his name as Elva W. McWhorter, a tavern manager, 4100 block of Manchester avenue. Police said he admitted having been with the other two but denied stealing the safe.

The safe, which weighs about 200 pounds, contained only $25. It had not been opened by the time the policemen arrived at the clubhouse.

St. Louis police said two typewriters and a check protector, apparently stolen along with the safe, are still missing.

On Way to Begin Sentences

Two Vitales surrendered to police at the Carr street station, saying they had heard they were being sought.

Heidenreich identified James Vitale as one of his assailants but said he was not sure whether John Vitale was the other.

Heidenreich had obtained the license number of one of the automobiles that drove off after he was beaten. The license was issued to John Vitale.

Police then showed Heidenreich a photograph of John Vitale and Heidenreich said he was one of the assailants.

Circuit Attorney Thomas F. Eagleton issued warrants charging the two Vitales with the beating. Both men later were indicted by a circuit court grand jury.

The sentences imposed today were recommended by Eagleton. There was no immediate explanation of why the men withdrew their previous not guilty pleas and pleaded guilty.

Morris Shenker, attorney for the two Vitales, told a Post-Dispatch reporter the cases were ready for trial as he walked into the criminal assignment division. The cases then were assigned for trial to Judge Casey's courtroom.

After a brief conference in Judge Casey's chambers, attended by Shenker, the judge and Eagleton, the guilty pleas were entered.

Shenker afterward told the reporter that the pleas of guilty were not recommended by him. When John Vitale was asked by the reporter why he decided to

MAN IS FOUND BURNED TO DEATH IN APARTMENT

Unidentified Body Discovered in Quarters of Executive Who Was Out of Town.

The badly burned body of an unidentified man was found today in a thirteenth floor apartment in the Frontenac Apartments, 40 North Kingshighway.

The discovery was made by a maid who had gone to clean the apartment, which is rented by Frank Heaston, an executive of Gardner Advertising Co.

Heaston, however, was in Chickasha, Okla., where some of his business associates had talked with him by telephone today.

Police reported that the body of the man was lying face down on the bedroom floor. The floor and bed clothes were burned badly and the mattress was on the floor. Draperies in the bedroom were scorched and paint on the walls and floor had been charred. Firemen said the fire had burned itself out.

No fire alarm had been sounded during the night and police were unable to find any nearby apartment owners who had smelled smoke or heard any shouts. The apartments are always closed tight because of air conditioning, it was reported.

Police said the man apparently fell asleep when smoking in bed and set the mattress afire.

of voting practices that prevent many Negroes from voting in Southern states.

"Many Americans even today are denied the franchise because of race," the report stated. "This is accomplished through the creation of legal impediments, administrative obstacles and positive discouragement engendered by fears of economic reprisal and physical harm."

After reviewing constitutional provisions affecting voting rights, the commission concluded that "legislation presently on the books is inadequate to assure that all our qualified citizens shall enjoy the right to vote."

A Moral Gap

The commission added: "There exists here a striking gap between our principles and our everyday practices. This is a moral gap. It spills over into and vitiates other areas of our society."

"It runs counter to our traditional concepts of fair play. It is a partial repudiation of our faith in the democratic system. It undermines the moral system of our national stand in international affairs. It reduces the productivity of our nation."

In recommending federal voting registration in instances of racial discrimination, the commission said its proposal would operate in this fashion:

The President would be authorized to act on receipt of sworn affidavits from at least nine citizens of a political subdivision stating that they have been denied the right to register because of race, color, religion or national origin.

If investigation by the Civil Rights Commission found the complaints to be valid, the President would direct the postmaster, United States attorney or other federal official in the area involved to serve as a temporary registrar.

In National Elections. The registrar would be authorized to register as voters any persons meeting the state's qualification laws. Persons registered in this fashion would be authorized to vote in national elections.

Commissioner John S. Battle, former governor of Virginia, dissented from the recommendation, asserting it "would place in the hands of the Federal Government a vital part of the election process so jealously guarded and carefully reserved to the states by their founding fathers."

The proposal for a constitutional amendment, which would go beyond the federal registration recommendation, was advanced by Chairman Hannah and two other commissioners, the Rev. Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University, and George M. Johnson, professor of law at Howard University.

During the registration procedure, a "stopgap" measure, they said it was intended to provide quick action to allow qualified Negroes to vote in next year's election. As a permanent remedy, they proposed eliminating complex voting requirements and providing clear, simple and easily enforceable standards.

Proposed Amendment

They said this could be done best by a constitutional amendment that would give the right to vote to every citizen meeting his state's age and residence requirements and who was not legally confined at the time of registration or election.

"The proposed amendment," the three commissioners said, "is in harmony with the American tradition and with the trend in the whole democratic world."

In a supplemental statement, Father Hesburgh said: "The American dream (of universal suffrage) would thus at last become a political reality and America could then validly proclaim to all the world that we have faith in the democratic process, without equivocation, chicanery or subterfuge."

Robert G. Sney, vice chairman of the commission and former dean of Southern Methodist University Law School, and Commissioner Doyle F. Carlton, former governor of Florida, objected to the amendment on the grounds that it was unnecessary and would alter the historic relationship of the Federal Government and the states. They were joined in opposition to the proposal by Battle.

The commission said its investigation had disclosed that some southern states deny Negroes the right to vote through discriminatory registration requirements. Some voter registration boards simply did not function, it reported.

Other Recommendations

Other voting recommendations included:

The Bureau of the Census be directed to compile registration and voting statistics according to race, color and national origin.

States be required to preserve registration and voting records for five years; the Civil Rights Act of 1957 be amended to empower federal registrars to administer state registration laws when qualified voters have been deprived of rights, that the commission be given authority to seek court help in enforcing compliance with its subpoenas instead of relying on the Justice Department to make the request.

Principal recommendations in the field of education included:

The commission be authorized to serve as a clearing house for information on desegregation programs and to serve as an advisory and conciliation service in assisting local school officials to prepare for desegregation.

An annual school census be made by the Office of Education to show the number and race of all students enrolled in public schools.

Commissioners Hannah, Hesburgh and Johnson advanced the proposal for prohibiting federal financial assistance to educational institutions practicing racial discrimination. The other three members of the commission opposed it, termed it "a program of economic coercion."

In the field of housing the report recommended that the President issue an executive order directing all federal agencies to shape their policies in accordance with "the constitutional objective of equal opportunity in housing."

It also recommended that the Housing and Home Financing Agency give "high priority" to the problem of gearing all federal housing agencies to a policy of equal opportunity for all persons; that the Public Housing Administration encourage location of public housing projects "on open land in good areas outside the present centers of racial concentration" and that the Urban Renewal Administration consider the views of minority groups in preparing community programs for urban renewal.

Senators' Comment

By the Associated Press.

Senator John Stennis (Dem.), Mississippi, said the recommendations were "extreme and shocking."

Senator James O. Eastland (Dem.), Mississippi, commented: "The only step remaining to assure complete federalization of the nation would be enactment of an FEPC (Fair Employment Practices Commission) bill to bring all employment under federal control."

Senator Richard B. Russell (Dem.), Georgia, called the report "a deliberate distortion of the facts" and said it represents "nothing more than the preconceived notions of three individuals."

Senator Herman Talmadge (Dem.), Georgia, said "The effect of carrying out its (the commission's) proposals would be to perpetuate that agency as an unconstitutional instrument of meddling and intimidation from which no facet of the lives, fortunes and sacred honor of the American people would be immune."

housing programs, some of which are out of money.

The bill was approved by the committee 13 to 6 with Senator William Proxmire (Dem.), Wisconsin, voting present, Senator Homer H. Capehart (Rep.), Indiana, was absent.

Talk With President. Republican congressional leaders told the President today there was still some hope that Congress would wind up its session this weekend.

Senator Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, the Democratic leader, issued new speed-up orders, but said that "there is no magic in Saturday" for an adjournment date.

Meanwhile, Senator Wayne Morse (Dem.), Oregon, who says he is opposing the sort of legislation that comes out of a session-end speed-up, blocked a move to permit the Senate Banking Committee to work on the compromise housing bill while the Senate was in session. Johnson got around that by calling for brief Senate recesses.

Morse also delayed, but did not actually head off by objection, a Johnson proposal to hold a "morning hour" in which Senators could make speeches, introduce bills and put material in the Congressional Record under a three-minute time limit.

Both time-saving devices required unanimous consent.

Dirksen Comment

After the regular meeting of Republican chiefs with Mr. Eisenhower, Senator Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois, the Republican leader, said: "This might be our last conference of the year. I hope that we can end our work this week. Maybe the country would like to have us out of here too."

Dirksen and Representative Charles Halleck of Indiana, the House Republican leader, said they had discussed with the President all major measures still facing final action.

Dirksen said he thought "we can get something out of the fire" on civil rights before the session is over. He added he did not believe Congress could pass anything more than a bill to extend the life of the federal Civil Rights Commission.

Halleck said approval of the President's request to remove the ceiling on long-term Government bonds was out of the ques-Herter to Cut Short Vacation, Fly to Washington.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (UPI)—Secretary of State Christian A. Herter has decided to cut short his vacation and fly to Washington this evening. He had hoped to remain at his summer home in Manchester, Mass., until the end of the week.

State Department spokesman Lincoln White declined to say flatly that the Laos crisis was the reason behind Herter's decision, but he implied that it was. "I assume that he determined in his own mind that he'd better get back down here, but I have no specifics," White said.

13-YEAR-OLD BOY ADMITS BREAKING INTO 28 HOUSES

A 13-year-old boy arrested early today by police investigating a report of a prowler at 5508 Vernon avenue has admitted breaking into 28 houses in recent weeks, police reported. On a number of these occasions he molested women, he said.

The boy, who at present is on probation as a juvenile offender for a purse snatching, was arrested by Patrolmen John Schuk and Ralph Michaels of the Page boulevard district.

He was identified by Mrs. Leslie Thomas of the Vernon avenue address as the youth she saw climbing through her first-floor bedroom window early today. She screamed when a noise awakened her and the boy fled back out the window. Police said the boy will be turned over to juvenile authorities.

PAN-AMERICAN ATHLETE FROM BRAZIL, FATALLY SHOT

NAPERVILLE, Ill., Sept. 8 (UPI)—Police said today a Brazilian athlete competing in the Pan-American games, who was found shot, might have taken his own life.

"It seems he was despondent, but over what we don't know," said Police Chief Irving Lichter.

The body of Ronaldo Duncan Arantes, 28 years old, of Pernambuco, was found yesterday by North Central College football players reporting for early practice. A pistol was near his right hand. His shirt was scorched with gunpowder burns. Arantes was a member of an eight-man crew in the games. His brother, Romulo, trainer of the crew, said he was positive Ronaldo had been murdered. Lichter said police were continuing to investigate the possibility of murder despite the indications of suicide.

FINED $1250, LACKED FEDERAL TAX STAMP

Leo J. Klimas, an East St. Louis tavern owner, was fined $1250 today for possessing coin-operated machines without a federal tax stamp.

United States District Judge William G. Juergens assessed the fine and court costs after Klimas pleaded guilty to the charge.

Klimas, who owns Klimas' Tavern, 5306 Caseyville avenue, East St. Louis, was arrested on May 7, 1957.

He was put on probation for three years by Judge Juergens and placed in the custody of the United States marshal until the fine and the court costs are paid.

Four other East St. Louis tavern operators pleaded guilty today of taking bets without obtaining the federal wagering tax stamp. They will be sentenced in the United States District Court in East St. Louis next Tuesday.

The four are Lawrence Buklad Sr. and Lawrence Buklad Jr., operators of a tavern at 1123 State street; Anthony J. Jacknewitz, former owner of Babe's Madhouse, 1331 North Fourteenth street, and Charles Rasin, who gave an address in the 1700 block of Lincoln avenue.

They were arrested on May 7, 1957, in a series of raids on establishments where bets allegedly were taken for the North

MISSISSIPPI BOAT WINS RACE, CITY TO NEW ORLEANS

Placing second among the 20 pairs of contestants who completed the race were Jack Ward and Pat Fickbohm of Long Beach, Calif. They trailed by 19 minutes and won a $800 prize. The only woman in the race, Mrs. Della Carville of Lakewood, Calif., and her husband, John, finished thirteenth.

Two East Side pairs, Harry Leight of Belleville and F. N. Jensen of East St. Louis, and Earl Welch of East St. Louis and Leon Reinhart of East Alton, finished fifth and seventh, respectively. The race started from St. Louis Saturday morning.

Internal Revenue Service agents and East St. Louis police raided 12 taverns, a newsstand and a filling station at that time and arrested 19 persons allegedly taking bets without possessing the $50 tax stamp.

The four tavern operators were released on $2500 bond.

SHOPLIFTING RING BROKEN UP, 9 HELD

A ring of shoplifters responsible for thefts from downtown stores in recent months was broken up Saturday with the arrest of five women and four girls.

Most of the thefts were committed at the instigation of a 16-year-old girl, who took specific orders for clothing and then passed on the orders to members of the ring, police said.

The breakup of the ring came with the arrest of Miss LaDonna Robinson, 18 years old, of the 3100 block of Magazine street.

She was arrested by store detectives in Famous-Barr Co. after they saw her steal a blouse. When arrested, she also had in her possession a purse reported stolen from Stix, Baer & Fuller department store.

The woman was turned over to officers of the Central district. She implicated others in the shoplifting ring.

The 16-year-old ringleader was arrested, along with another 16-year-old girl, and two other girls, one 14 and one 15.

Also arrested were Josephine Williams, 25, of the 1900 block of Cole street; Marie Ivory, 23, of the 1800 block of Cole; Essie Keys, 17, of the 2800 block of Dayton street, and Catherine Lewis, 18, of the 3100 block of Magazine.

All admitted participating in recent thefts from downtown stores, police said. Each was booked suspected of stealing.

REPRESENTATIVE BROWN NOT TO RUN FOR GOVERNOR

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (AP)—Representative Charles H. Brown (Dem.), Missouri, said today he would not be a candidate for Governor of Missouri next year.

Brown, serving his second term in the House of Representatives from Missouri's Seventh District, said in a statement that many Missourians had urged him to run for Governor.

"But there are many compelling reasons why I should not and will not, seek the governorship," Brown said. "I am in the midst of some undertakings in the Congress which are important to southwest Missourians, and I do not wish to leave these projects hanging in mid-air."

CHIEF JEREMIAH O'CONNELL

that Chapman is his personal choice for chief. In August, Blair sent telegrams to members of the police board saying he was "extremely interested" in Chapman's selection.

Subsequently, Blair said he would meet with the board to discuss selection of a new chief. The meeting has not taken place. Asked today about such a meeting, Priest declined to comment.

O'Connell, white-haired and soft-spoken, has served longer than any other St. Louis police chief. He became acting chief on Dec. 26, 1946, and was named chief on Jan. 23, 1947.

When he leaves his office next Tuesday, he will have spent 44 years as a policeman.

O'Connell made his announcement after the board of trustees of the Police Retirement System met today and unanimously voted to begin the chief's pension on Sept. 15.

Mandatory Action.
The action was mandatory in the absence of any request to the contrary by the police board.

O'Connell built a reputation as a tough, hardworking policeman. His first beat was in "Pigs Feet Alley," a rough neighborhood near a packing plant at Third and Convent streets.

This area became the stamping grounds of the old Cuckoo gang.

The police-chief-to-be had his share of combating gang warfare. In 1926, he was assigned to the "gangs and guns squad." With three other detectives, he rode in an automobile equipped with a bullet-proof windshield. They carried submachine guns and sawed-off shotguns.

Police were involved in a series of pitched battles with the gangs. The criminals suffered heavy casualties and gradually faded from the St. Louis scene.

Promoted to Lieutenant.
O'Connell was a sergeant when he was named acting assistant chief of detectives in 1933. The appointment carried a promotion to lieutenant.

During his nine years as assistant chief of detectives, he acquired a reputation as an administrator. O'Connell also won respect for the quiet consideration he gave the men who worked under him.

O'Connell rose to commander of the Deer Street district in 1943 and a few months later to commander of the Central district. In 1945, he was made assistant chief of police under James J. Mitchell.

When Mitchell requested a captain's job in 1947, O'Connell was named acting chief.

As chief, O'Connell has played an important part in modernizing the records system and other departments. He inspected police departments in other cities and brought back ideas for improvement of the force here.

A national magazine recognized his "honest and efficient administration" in an article in 1953. Last January, O'Connell received a silver plaque from the St. Louis Council on Police-Community Relations for his service to the community.

A widower, he has two sons and two daughters. One of his sons, Richard, is a lieutenant assigned to Central district. The chief lives at 3114 Illinois avenue.

HELD AS SPEEDER, FOUND TO BE A ROCKEFELLER

GRAY, Me., Sept. 8 (AP)—A state trooper who arrested New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller's youngest son for speeding said yesterday the youth was "one of the nicest young men I've met on the Maine turnpike."

In fact, Trooper Warren P. Munsey had a friendly 30-minute talk with Michael Rockefeller, 20 years old, without realizing he was talking with the son of the New York chief executive.

It was not until a bail commissioner arrived that Munsey became aware of the prominence of the man he had arrested Saturday for doing 80 miles an hour in a 70-mile-an-hour zone. When asked if he was related to the New York Governor, Michael replied, "He's my father."

TWO SENATORS CLASH; ORDERED TO TAKE SEATS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (UPI)—A sharp dispute over civil rights erupted in the Senate last night. Before it ended, Senators Strom Thurmond (Dem.), South Carolina, and Jacob K. Javits (Rep.), New York, were ordered to their seats for maligning each other's home states.

Each was ordered to sit down by the Senate's temporary presiding officer, Senator E. L. Bartlett (Dem.), Alaska. He acted under a Senate rule which states that no Senator shall refer "offensively" to the state of a colleague.

Thurmond was first to run afoul of the rule. He and Senator James O. Eastland (Dem.), Mississippi, were accusing Javits of trying to "export" New York City's crime and racial strife through racial integration. Thurmond had just stated that he would be "ashamed" if he were a New Yorker, what with "all the murders that have been committed."

Senator Wayne Morse (Dem.), Oregon, intervened and asked that Thurmond and Eastland be required to take their seats. Bartlett, commenting that he had no alternative under the rules, directed Thurmond to sit down.

Later, Thurmond demanded that Javits take his seat. That came after Javits said he would continue his civil rights fight as long as his state keeps paying 20 per cent of the nation's tax bill.

He said the tax money included "million of dollars" allotted to southern states "which are flouting the constitution."

The Senate flare-up came as Representative Emanuel Celler (Dem.), New York, made a new attempt to pry a five-point civil rights bill out of the House Rules Committee where it has been stalled for several weeks.

It appeared likely, however, that Congress would adjourn before Celler could succeed. Celler is chairman of the House Judiciary Committee which drafted the bill.

The Senate row began when Thurmond offered for the Congressional Record a published report of crime and racial strife in large northern cities. He linked the crime to forced integration.

Javits disagreed. He said the fundamental question was whether inequality was to be ended or whether it would continue for 50 or 100 years.

TWO SEIZE $450 IN INSURANCE FIRM HOLDUP

A total of $450 in cash was seized today by two armed men
Life Insurance Co., 5081 Delmar boulevard.

Julian Rainey, office manager, told police the men, masked and armed with revolvers, entered his office and one said, "Let's have it." He was referring to a leather valise which was on a desk and contained the money.

The other man pointed his revolver at Miss Doreen Zimmerman, a clerk. Rainey and Miss Zimmerman were forced into a small rear room before the robbers fled.

Both men wore women's stockings over their faces.

Shortly after the holdup, James
S. Stanley and Galen L. Irby, former convicts, were picked up by police and booked suspected of robbery and stealing over $50.

Stanley, 25 years old, who gave an address in the 2100 block of Mullanphy avenue, was arrested after he tried to elude two members of the police intelligence squad who spotted him in the 5100 block of Delmar.

The automobile Stanley abandoned in the chase proved to be a car stolen earlier from a lot at 5126 Delmar. Police said they would seek a warrant charging Stanley with stealing over $50 and driving with his driver's license revoked.

Picked Up at Apartment.

Irby was picked up in his apartment at 5082 Washington boulevard. Police from the
sitting on a mattress under which were checks bearing the insurance company's name.

A valise, a metal box and $208 also were found, but they have not been identified as taken during the holdup.

A woman who was in Irby's apartment and three men who were sitting in an automobile in front of the apartment also were arrested and booked suspected of robbery. They were being questioned at police headquarters.

Seven safes in Union Market were broken into early Sunday.
The market occupies a city block bounded by Lucas avenue and Delmar boulevard and Sixth street and Broadway.

Each of the safes was pounded open and the combinations knocked off.

About $1000 was reported missing from the safe of Frank Busack, who operates a fruit stand in the market.

Busack's safe and another safe belonging to Robert Risse were moved into the Will Doctor Meat Co. stall, where they were broken open.

Other Safes Opened.

In the same stall, the meat company's safe was broken into.
An undetermined amount of money was taken from that safe and Risse's safe.

the Kram Live Fish Co., the other to the Paul Cheese Co., were moved from the first floor to the basement and placed inside a walk-in refrigerator of the McFarland Meat Co.

A total of $80 was taken from the cheese company safe. An undetermined amount was missing from the Kram safe.

Other safes broken open belonged to G. M. Telle Meat Co. and to August Dattilo, who operates a fruit stand. Undetermined amounts of money were taken.

Two metal filing cabinets in the McFarland stall also were broken into.

The thefts were discovered when a burglar alarm was set off, summoning police to the market. The alarm went off when an overhead door was opened from the inside.

Hurt by Purse Thieves.

Miss Mildred Heller, 53 years
arm late Saturday night when she was knocked to the sidewalk by two youths who grabbed her purse. The incident occurred at Jefferson and Park avenues.

Miss Heller, 1405 Missouri avenue, was driven to City Hospital by Patrolmen Joseph Saputo and Ronald Benson of the Lynch street station.

As the officers were driving north on Jefferson, they saw two youths who ran when they noticed the police car. The officers chased them on foot and apprehended one youth at La-Salle street and Jefferson.

The youth admitted stealing Miss Heller's purse, implicating the second youth, who was arrested later at his home.

The youths, one 14, the other 16, also admitted committing recent burglaries in the area. Miss Heller's purse was recovered.
She was released after treatment at the hospital.

$300 Theft at Home.

Theft of $300 from a bedroom
ment of Mrs. Barbara Smith, 902 North Kingshighway, was reported to police yesterday.

Mrs. Francis George, wife of a former member of the Board of Police Commissioners, reported to police yesterday that two loaded revolvers were stolen from her home at 6210 Westminster place.

The thefts occurred while Mr. and Mrs. George were out of town over the Labor day weekend.

the moment at least, everything is going splendidly," he said.

Mrs. Eisenhower, in a yellow cotton dress with matching broad-brimmed hat, was the first person to meet him after the plane landed.

Speaking of his visits to Bonn, London and Paris, the President continued his informal report on the trip:

"Everywhere there was voiced governmental unity, but far more heartening than this was the evidence that can be seen in all of these countries of the deep friendship of these people for the American people."

Mr. Eisenhower returned home convinced that the people of the Western nations stand strongly together in their attitude toward Soviet Russia. He remained amazed at the enthusiasm and the size of the tremendous crowds that greeted him at every stop.

Finds Mutual Trust.
"There is no other single fact of the modern world that is now so important, I think, as this:

That the peoples of the Western world have for each other a very deep, abiding affection, mutual trust—and in this there (is) a tremendous personal, moral and indeed a material and economic strength.

"I am glad to bring you that kind of news."

By the Associated Press.

Mr. Eisenhower looked ruddy and vigorous as he stepped down the ramp from his Boeing 707 jet to the martial strains of "Hail to the Chief."

At the foot of the ramp, Mrs.
Eisenhower hurried forward to embrace him. "Welcome back," she said after kissing him warmly.

The Vice President and Mrs.
Nixon then shook his hand, with the Vice President telling Mr.
Eisenhower he had done "a splendid job."

Many Cabinet members and Republican members of Congress and their families were on hand and Mr. Eisenhower shook hands with many of them before mounting a small platform to address the crowd.

Sentimental Trip.

"I'm so glad to be back," the President said.

Mr. Eisenhower said that in his talks with West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer, British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan and the French president, Charles de Gaulle, he found "governmental unity."

For Mr. Eisenhower, the trip to Europe was something of a sentimental journey in addition to being a self-assigned diplomatic chore of great importance.
In Britain and France, he was reunited with old comrades in arms from World War II. And in Germany he got an emotional welcome from a people who, just 14 years ago, were crushed by the Eisenhower-led armies of the wartime allies.

The President had hoped to stop at Iceland on his way home for a planesside lunch with that country's president, Asgeir As-geirsson. Bad weather forced a change of plans, and instead he flew directly to Washington with a refueling stop at Gander.
On arriving at the White House from the airport, Mr. Eisenhower spent about 45 minutes in his office on official business and conferences with staff members.

The European trip was one of the most energetic ever undertaken by the President. He will have little chance to rest, however, before the talks with Khrushchov begin next Tuesday.

Backyard Barbecues, Outings Mark Last Holiday of Summer

St. Louisans settled back into the work-a-day world today after enjoying family outings and backyard barbecues over the final holiday weekend of the summer.

Many persons took advantage of the three-day weekend by taking trips to the Lake of the Ozarks and other resort areas for fishing, swimming and boating.

The weather co-operated with cloudless skies and cool breezes. The mercury climbed to 93 degrees at 4 p.m. yesterday, but the average for the day was 82.

Golf Courses, Zoo Favored. Picnic areas, golf courses, amusement parks and the Zoo were among the favorite places for thousands.

The lagoon at the foot of Art Hill in Forest Park was the scene of a free water show sponsored by the city and Radio Station KMOX.

The Black Knights drums and bugle corps of Belleville performed before the show and the Laclede Concert Band presented a musical program afterwards.

On the East Side there were two Labor day parades. Marchers proceeded from Sixteenth street and Illinois avenue in East St. Louis to Jones Park for an all-day picnic and members of the Belleville Trades and Labor Assembly paraded through the city to Swans Community Park for an outing.

A fireworks display was presented at Scott Air Base after a performance by an Air Force drum and bugle corps.

In a Labor day address United States Representative Melvin Price, (Dem.), East St. Louis, warned Americans "not to expect too much" from the exchange of visits between President Eisenhower and Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

Speaking before the national assembly of the Armenian Church Youth Organization of America at the Chase Hotel, Price said:

"It is utterly unrealistic to expect that men of the determination and power of Khrushchev and his colleagues will suddenly reverse all their policies because they have some private discussions with the American President."

CAHOKIA SCHOOL TEACHERS SPLIT IN PAY DISPUTE

A split between two teachers organizations in the Cahokia School District has developed over the possibility of a teachers' strike against the district's public schools.
 The Cahokia Federation of Teachers, Local 1272, today accused the Cahokia Classroom Teachers Association of being "an anti-union force." The C.T.A. has opposed a teachers' strike.
 The charge was contained in a letter distributed by the local and signed by its president, Arthur Mills.

 Members of Local 1272 last Thursday authorized their officers to call a strike on 24 hours notice. The local is seeking a wage increase of $300 a year for teachers. The school board contends that the budget cannot stand a salary increase this year.
 The C.T.A. claims to represent between 50 and 65 of the district's 180 teachers. Local 1272 represents about half the teachers. Some teachers belong to both organizations and some to neither.
 A C.T.A. statement signed by Mrs. Ruth Trigg, president, said the organization does not approve any "break in school attendance."
 The statement said teachers were told last spring they would not get salary increases this year. "Any teacher who was dissatisfied had the whole summer to find a better paying position," the statement added.
 The letter signed by Mills accused the C.T.A. of taking its position "without much study and investigation."
 Mills wrote that his group was "disappointed" at the C.T.A. stand. He said the C.T.A. should have taken greater pains to investigate the school board argument that the budget would not permit salary increases.
 Mills said the local's salary committee "found areas of spending" in the district's budget which could be used "for at least a token raise" for teachers.
 Schools in the Cahokia district have become badly overcrowded because of the recent growth of subdivisions. Grades one through three have been on half-day schedules since classes began on Tuesday.
 School officials point to the overcrowding as one reason for their tight financial situation.

WOMAN KILLED, HUSBAND HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Mrs. Thelma Ruth Stigall, 6406 Derby avenue, Wellston, was killed yesterday when the automobile in which she was a passenger plunged over an embankment and overturned.

The accident occurred on U.S. Highway 61, five miles south of Ste. Genevieve, Mo. Mrs. Stigall was 59 years old.

Her husband, Charles B. Stigall, 61, who was driving the car, is in serious condition in Perry County Hospital at Perryville, Mo.

Stigall told the state highway patrol he lost control of the car when a truck pulled into his path.

Motorcyclist Killed.
Joseph D. Dreaves, 150 Sycamore street, Carrollton, was fatally injured Sunday when the motorcycle he was riding ran off Illinois Highway 67A three miles north of Carrollton and struck a post.

Dreaves, 17, died of head injuries a short time later.

Donald Clark, 20, of Protem, Mo., died Saturday night of injuries suffered when two automobiles collided Saturday on U.S. Highway 160 near Branson, Mo. He was the sixth person to die as a result of the accident.

The others killed were Miss Harriet W. Piel, about 45 years old, 729 East Clarence avenue; Joe Harmann, 37, Isabella, Mo., formerly of St. Louis; his son, Douglas, 5; Robert Steele, 33, Dupon, Ill.; and James Lord, 17, Protem.

Injured are Hermann's wife, Mrs. Mary Louise Burk Hermann, 28, and her niece, Miss Mary Burk, 18, 23 Reading avenue, Maryland Heights.

The Missouri Highway Patrol said Clark was the driver of one car in which Lord was a passenger. Steele drove the second car, in which there were five passengers.

The patrol said the car driven by Clark apparently topped the crest of a hill in the middle of the highway and collided head on with Steele's vehicle.

Patrol Wagon, Car Crash.
Five persons were injured, none of them seriously, when a police patrol wagon collided with an automobile yesterday at Ninth and Walnut streets.

The patrol wagon, answering a call at Ninth and Market streets, was northbound on Ninth when it struck the right side of the car, police reported. The car, eastbound in Walnut, was overturned by the impact. There are no stop signs at the intersection.

Driver of the automobile was Arthur A. Mollet, 18, 1319 North Forty-first street, East St. Louis, police reported. Driver of the patrol wagon was Kenneth Farris, 23, 3505 North Florissant avenue.

Passengers in the car were Miss Judy A. Kreitner, 16, 1224 North Seventy-first street; Charles R. Gason, 16, 2102 North Sixtieth street, and Miss Connie Roe Dixon, 15, 633 Post place, all of East St. Louis.

Those injured were treated at City Hospital for cuts and bruises.

HOUSE DECLARES ALFORD WAS ELECTED LEGALLY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (AP)—Without debate, the House today formally declared Representative Dale Alford (Dem.), Arkansas, Little Rock segregationist, entitled to his seat in Congress.

By a standing vote of 245-5, the House adopted a resolution from its Administration Committee declaring Alford legally unseated Representative Brooks Hays (Dem.), Arkansas, in last November's election.

Alford, in private life an eye surgeon, was a surprise victor over Hays in a last-minute write-in campaign. Racial integration of the Little Rock public schools was a paramount issue in Alford's campaign. Hays is regarded as a moderate on the issue.

Assault Case

warrant and set Frangel's bond at $25,000 after Elam had refused to increase the $2500 appearance bond in the Bel-Ridge case.

Viewed by Woman.

Later, during the preliminary hearing in the office of Second District Constable Harry Kublin, a Jennings woman who said she had been raped last Aug. 10, was permitted to hear Frangel's voice as he answered questions.

She said afterwards that she could not be sure his voice was that of her assailant, but she added that he looked like the man.

It was the Jennings woman's partial identification of Frangel from news pictures that led to his arrest Saturday night by Florissant police.

However, before the victim could view Frangel on Saturday, Elam, called Florissant Police Chief Thomas P. Walsh and ordered him to release Frangel or be held in contempt of court.

As a result of today's action, Frangel is now under $25,000 bond on the charge of attempted rape of the Bel-Ridge woman. He did not immediately furnish the bond.

The $2500 appearance bond issued by Elam on open charges growing out of the same offense is now discharged.

No formal complaint has been issued against Frangel in the rape of the Jennings woman.

When he appeared in court today, Frangel wore green sun glasses and had exchanged his long haircut for a crew cut. He was dressed in a neat brown suit and showed no evidence of nervousness except when he attempted to dodge photographers.

Elam's order freeing Frangel last Saturday night had prompted County Prosecuting Attorney Norman Anderson to seek an opinion from Missouri Attorney General John M. Dalton on Elam's bail bond rulings.

Elam was quoted by Chief Walsh as saying that the police officer would be in contempt of court if he held Frangel for investigation into the Jennings woman's complaint.

"You have no right to arrest him for anything allegedly committed prior to the issuance of the appearance bond," Elam was quoted by Walsh as saying. The bond was issued last Thursday.

Elam told the Post-Dispatch that the appearance bond was to assure Frangel's appearance in his court to answer any and all charges that may be placed against him.

In order to arrest Frangel again for an offense committed prior to the issuance of the appearance bond, arresting authorities would have to catch Frangel with some concrete evidence of an additional offense, Elam contended.

Elam said the Jennings woman's tentative identification of Frangel was "nothing."

Chief Walsh made the arrest at the request of Jennings Police Chief John Oberitz because Frangel's home is at 700 St. Judith lane, Florissant. Oberitz said he made the request after the woman came to his office and said she believed Frangel was her attacker.

She said she had been waiting at a bus stop at Jennings Station road and West Florissant avenue last Aug. 10 when a man drove up and asked if she would like a ride to work.

Because she had been given rides by fellow workers on prior occasions, she accepted the offer, thinking the driver was another fellow worker, she told Oberitz.

However, the man drove her to a secluded place in Arbor Terrace, threatened to cut her throat if she cried out and then raped her, she said.

In the warrant issued by Murphy, Frangel is charged with entering the home of a Bel-Ridge woman last Aug. 31 and attempting to rape her.

Although he did not accomplish his purpose because of resistance by the woman, she was compelled to submit to having her hands and legs tied before Frangel fled.

After Frangel was arrested and while he was being questioned, Elam accepted the $2500 appearance bond and ordered his release.

Elam said later he had not been aware of Frangel's record. He called attention to the fact that no formal charge had been filed against the man at the time of his release.

Frangel was convicted last March 19 of the rape of a 47-year-old woman who had testified that he tricked her into abandoning her automobile on Halls Ferry road near U.S. Highway 66 on Nov. 12, 1957.

He had stopped her by telling her that her gasoline tank was on fire. He offered to drive her home, but instead he drove to a point near the Missouri river and raped her, the woman testified.

Frangel was at liberty on a $10,000 appeal bond from this conviction at the time that the last two offenses are alleged to have occurred. He also is facing additional charges of rape and sodomy and has given bonds totaling $15,000 on these.

CUTS RIBBON, IS PAID 70¢

PORTSMOUTH, England, Sept. 8 (UPI)—An admiral's wife brought in some extra money for the family coffers yesterday by working as a shipbuilder.

Mrs. Elizabeth Unwin earned 70 cents by cutting the ribbon that started cranes lowering a 15-ton ship's keel into place. Her husband, Adm. John Unwin, said proudly: "Five shillings represents the piecework for laying a keel."

CYPRIT PAPERS PROTEST BY NOT PUBLISHING FOR DAY

NICOSIA, Cyprus, Sept. 8 (AP)—Greek and English language newspapers did not publish in Cyprus today in protest against an attack on a local editor, beaten up by a gang last Saturday.

The action was ordered yesterday at a special meeting of the island's journalists' union.

The editor beaten up was Loizos Kythreotis of the Greek language daily Ethniki. The attack followed an editorial criticizing Edma—the political front formed when Eoka was disbanded. Eoka was the fighting arm of the Greek underground opposing British rule here.

Two October addresses canceled by Eisenhower.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (UPI)—President Eisenhower has canceled speaking engagements at Harvard and Brown Universities next month, Press Secretary James C. Hagerty reported today.

Hagerty said the cancellations were necessitated by the exchange of visits with Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev and the visits here of the Prime Minister of Italy, the President of Guinea and the President of Mexico in the next two months.

Mr. Eisenhower had been scheduled to speak at Brown in Providence, R.I., Oct. 21, and at Harvard, Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 25. Hagerty said the cancellations did not mean a definite date had been set for the President's trip to Russia.

POLICE DOGS PROVE VALUE OVER HOLIDAY

Members of the police canine corps proved their worth on several occasions over the Labor Day weekend.

Jock, working with Patrolman Allen Duncan, was credited with assists in three incidents Saturday night.

Jock picked up the trail of a prowler at 1170 Hamilton boulevard and held the man at bay until Duncan arrested him.

Shortly before that, Jock and Duncan appeared in front of the Union Theater at 1510 Union boulevard, where a 16-year-old youth was creating a disturbance.

At the sight of the dog, the youth stopped what he was doing. He was arrested and turned over to juvenile authorities, who placed him in the custody of his parents.

Later that night, Jock came to the rescue of Patrolman James Meegan, who had become involved in an argument with several persons who gathered around him at Hamilton and Bartmer avenues.

The argument started when the father of a youth who had been arrested earlier Saturday night on peace disturbance charges asked Meegan why the youth was being held by police.

Meegan, who was off duty, had nothing to do with the arrest.

When Jock and Duncan appeared, the crowd backed away from Meegan. Seven men and four youths were arrested and booked suspected of general peace disturbance.

An 18-year-old youth was captured by Duke II Sunday night, after a night watchman at Midlewest Freightways Inc., 527 South Theresa avenue, reported to police that he had surprised two youths in the act of stealing from a truck in the company yard.

Patrolman Frank Pierce,

Duke's handler, turned the dog loose in the yard. Also on the scene was Rinny, whose handler is Patrolman Richard Quinisk.

Duke picked up a scent that led to the Grand boulevard overpass, where the youth was seated on a bench. He was arrested and booked suspected of attempted larceny. He denied the charge.

GUATEMALA CITY, Sept. 8 (AP)—A bomb exploded last night near a wall surrounding the building housing the papal nuncio, Magr. Ambrogio Marchionni as he was dining with Archbishop Mariano Rosell Arellano. The blast broke 11 windows but no one was injured.

BILL TO WITHHOLD EARNINGS TAX FROM U.S. PAY IS DEAD

Special to the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—A bill which would authorize the withholding of the St. Louis earnings tax from the pay checks of federal employees who work in the city is dead for this session of Congress, Representative Thomas B. Curtis (Rep.), Webster Groves, said today.

The House rules committee has refused to clear the measure and send it to the floor for consideration under a procedure requiring only a simple majority for passage, Curtis said.

Rules Committee action was sought after the bill was rejected by the House last week when it was brought up under suspension of the rules. The proposed law failed by five votes to get the two-thirds favorable majority needed under suspension.

Efforts to get Rules committee approval will be made again next January or February, Curtis added.

AMERICAN SORRY HE RENOUNCED U.S. CITIZENSHIP

MOSCOW, Sept. 8 (UPI)—Nicholas Petrulli, who renounced his American citizenship on Sept. 3, said today he wanted to give up his plan to become a Soviet citizen and return to the United States.

"I have done a stupid thing," he told reporters.

However, United States Embassy officials told him his renunciation constituted a legal act and could not be withdrawn. Whether Washington could refuse to accept his renunciation and thus restore his citizenship was not clear. Petrulli said his about-face did not stem from any disillusionment with the Soviet Union.

"It's just my personal situation," he said. "There's nobody here to look out for me. At least at home I have friends and relatives."

Petrulli has received no reply from Soviet authorities to his request for citizenship. He is virtually penniless except for a return ticket home. His last American address was Valley Stream, Long Island, N.Y.

CABINET GROUP URGES VIGOROUS INFLATION FIGHT

By RICHARD E. MOONEY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—The Administration's Cabinet-level economic committee says inflation must be fought more vigorously now than it has been in the past.

The committee, tracing the history of price ups and downs in this country, made the point that no longer are there periods of major price decline to offset the periods of price increases. Thus new price rises pile on top of earlier increases.

"It is clear that public policies for combating inflation must be more energetic in the future than they have been in the past quarter century," the committee said.

These findings were presented Sunday in the second of a series of informational statements by the Cabinet committee on price stability for economic growth. Vice President Richard M. Nixon is chairman of the committee. The executive vice chairman is W. Allen Wallis, who is on leave as dean of the Graduate School of Business at the University of Chicago. The other members are the Secretaries of the Treasury, Agriculture, Labor and Commerce, the Postmaster General and the chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers.

"The Record on Prices." The statement was entitled "the record on prices." The first one, published two weeks ago, was "what do we really want from our economy?" and the answer was growth, maximum opportunities for employment and reasonable assurance of stable prices.

The committee's comment on the immediate price trend was circumspect: "In the past three months consumer prices have been rising, but since this rise has been caused partly by seasonal factors, it is still too early to say whether the period of stability has ended. In periods of rapid economic expansion like the present, however, upward pressure on the price level is always great."

The statement made no policy declarations. The committee recommendations will come later.

A postscript to Sunday's statement assessed the uses and limitations of the consumer price index. It pointed out that the index does not measure "the cost of living" but only the cost of specific consumer goods and services—and not perfectly—and concluding that notwithstanding the limitations the index "is perhaps the best of its kind in the world."

The main body of the statement first sets out to demonstrate that prices have not been rising constantly since colonial times. Rather, they have risen and fallen for various reasons.

Secondly, the statement dwells on the last 20 to 25 years, when prices have risen but not fallen.

Mixture of Trends.

The average rate of price increases over the last 240 years has been "something like one half of 1 per cent a year," the committee said, but it has been a mixture of upward and downward trends, and the trends themselves have been a mixture.

1. There have been sharp peaks in wartime, usually followed by declines almost as sharp. The committee said that in peacetime there has been a decline at an average rate of approximately one half of 1 per cent a year.

Doubled in 25 Years.

Turning to recent times the committee said:

"Prices now are more than double what they were nearly 25 years ago after pulling out of their recession trough. In contrast, prices then were only double what they had been 200 years before."

"In the past quarter century, although there has been one severe recession and four mild recessions, only one of the mild recessions was accompanied by an appreciable decline in consumer prices."

It noted three periods of price stability in this era: 1838-40, 1893-96 and the period beginning in early 1928 that may or may not be ending now.

"Perhaps the greatest difference between the past quarter century and our previous history is that wartime prices seem to have become permanent," it said.

"In summary," it declared, "it is not the periods of rising average prices but the virtual absence of periods of falling average prices" that distinguishes that past 25 years.

It called the elimination of deflationary periods "an important step toward reasonable price stability" but said it means that "rises in the price level are now permanent and cumulative in a way that they were not in the preceding two centuries."

ELECTRIC HEATING

Practical today for homes, stores and factories

IN HOMES: Mr. W. J. Schejbal, Contractor, South St. Louis County, says: "I put electric heat cables in the ceilings when we built our own home 6 years ago. We have no furnace, duct-work, motor or blower... saved $1,500 on installation. We control the temperature in each room individually. The air is so clean I haven't painted inside yet."

IN LOAN AGENCIES: Mr. Roy L. Tarter, Pres., Carondelet Savings & Loan Assoc., says: "We wanted year-round air-conditioning in our new building, so we chose the heat pump because it heats or cools as the weather changes and costs less to install. It takes no floor space... needs no combustible fuel—just air and electricity."

IN OFFICES: Mr. W. R. Meyer, St. Louis District Sales Manager, Motor Cargo, Inc., says: "Our electric heat pump installation saved us money over a conventional heating and cooling system, as well as valuable floor space. The automatic change from heating to cooling as the weather changes is a feature that we really like."

FOR FULL INFORMATION, write or phone us today. You'll be surprised at how little electric heating now costs in a well-insulated home, store, office or factory.

SOYBEANS AND CORN LOWER AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 8 (AP)—Steady selling today held corn and soybean futures well below previous closes most of the time on the board of trade while other grains ranged generally steady to firm.

September contracts of both corn and soybeans were down more than a cent at times. Dealers said some of the soybean weakness was related to setback in soybean meal but that there was an unexpected amount of hedge selling.

The selling of corn was described as liquidation following reports over the holiday weekend of rapid crop development. Scattered export and flour mill demand steadied wheat most of the day.

Price Index Peak Emphasizes Concern Over Value of Money

Purchasing Power of St. Louis Consumer's Dollar Down 53 Pct. in 20 Years.

By William H. Kester
Post-Dispatch Business Correspondent.

With the consumer price index at a record peak in July and with the current widespread concern about inflation, the question, "What is our money worth?" is heard more frequently.

We can answer, for example, that the purchasing power of the average St. Louis consumer's dollar has declined 53 per cent since 1939, as a result of higher prices. Or, to put it another way, it takes a dollar today to buy the same quantity of consumer goods and services 47 cents would buy in 1939.

Just as correctly, we could answer that the dollar today was worth 42 cents of money with 1939 purchasing power in terms of average wholesale prices. Or, using the comprehensive index of prices for deflating the gross national product, the average dollar in the second quarter of 1959 would purchase only 43 per cent of the physical amount of goods and services as it would in 1939.

Each of the three answers is correct in terms of the goods and services to be priced in determining the value of money. It is necessary to define the goods and services to be used in valuing the dollar to have a meaningful statement. Further, the question is meaningless unless the time period for measuring the change in the value of money is stated.

How has the value of the average St. Louis worker's dollar varied in the last 20 years? The following table shows the value of the June 1959 dollar in terms of the United States Bureau of Labor Statistics consumer price index for St. Louis for selected years:

Year	Value
1929	58 cents
1939	47 "
1950	85 "
1957	97 "

The dollar one family spends may have more or less purchasing power today relative to some earlier date than indicated by the consumer price index because its purchases differ from the pattern used in making the index. The 1950 consumption

Emerson Electric Raises Cash Dividend, Votes Stock

Emerson Electric Mfg. Co. increased its regular cash quarterly dividend by 5 cents to 45 cents a share of common stock, payable Sept. 30 to shareholders of record on Sept. 18. In addition, the directors voted a 4 per cent common stock dividend payable on Sept. 30, or as soon as possible thereafter, to holders of record on Sept. 18. No fractional shares will be issued. A 3 per cent stock dividend was paid on Dec. 31, 1958.

W. R. Persons, president, said the increases in the regular quarterly cash dividend and the stock dividend were made to reflect the improved earnings of the company in the current fiscal year ending Sept. 30.

The stock dividend in both years was to conserve the working capital because of the company's need for cash to finance the expansion program, Persons stated.

Steel production in the St. Louis area this week was estimated at 30,792 tons at the rate of 78.6 per cent of capacity. Actual tonnage last week was 35,390 at the rate of 90.4 per cent of capacity.

National Steel Output Up.

Steel mills will turn out an estimated 337,000 tons this week, up slightly from actual production of 332,000 tons last week, the American Iron and Steel Institute said.

The forecast is equal to 11.9

per cent of capacity compared with last week's 11.7 per cent of capacity. A month ago weekly output was 335,000 tons, a year ago, where there was no strike, production was 1,780,000 tons.

Latest News From World Of Business

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (AP)—The first two weeks of the steel strike sharply curtailed growth of business inventories and put a damper on factory sales, the Commerce Department reported today.

During July, the department said, inventories increased by $500,000,000 after adjustment for season factors. This compared with an average of about $800,000,000 in each of the three preceding months.

Manufacturers added only $100,000,000 to inventories in July compared with $500,000,000 in June. Stocks of wholesalers and retailers increased by about the same margin as in June.

Many factories were building up supplies of steel in June and early July in anticipation of the strike. After the walkout began on July 15, they had to begin using these inventories for current production.

At the end of July, the report said, total business inventories stood at $88,000,000,000, up more than four billion dollars from a year earlier.

Sales at all levels of business fell $300,000,000 in July to $60,000,000,000. Virtually all of this decline was registered by manufacturers and the report attributed this to the steel strike.

Retail sales were up 1 per cent from June to a record high of $18,300,000,000.

RESIDUAL FUEL OIL IMPORTS east of the Rockies totaled 7,556,630 barrels during July, the Oil Import Administration reported. This was 11.7 per cent of the total import allocation for the July-December six-month import allocation period, leaving 88.3 per cent, or 59,007,882 barrels which could be brought in by Dec. 31. The summary, first of a monthly series on the residual fuel oil import situation, said the six-month allocation of 66,873,512 barrels compared with actual imports of 65,136,000 barrels during the last half of 1958. The July total of 7,556,630 barrels imported compared with actual imports of 8,122,000 barrels in July 1958.

COTTON TEXTILE MARKET was slow Tuesday. Buying was mostly for spot and nearby deliveries. Large yardages of cloth already purchased by converters for use this year and the prolonged stalemate in steel negotiations discouraged demand for goods for delivery in 1960.

The wool goods market was quiet. The armed services will be in the market for 1,230,320 yards of wool serge cloth with an additional 527,280 yards set aside for small business. The tentative deliveries on this business cover the March-August period of next year.

F. W. WOOLWORTH CO. REPORTED August sales of $72,200,904, up 4.5 per cent from $69,086,574 in the same month last year. Sales for the first eight months of 1959 totaled $524,940,739, up 4.9 per cent from $500,229,893 in the similar 1958 period.

PRICE UPPED TO 31 1/2 CENTS

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (AP)—The Anaconda Sales Co. said that because of the continuing strike of miners affecting domestic production, it would charge 31 1/2 cents a pound for foreign mined copper starting Wednesday.

This represents an increase of 1 1/2 cents a pound for this type of copper. It follows a boost of 1 1/2 cents a pound to 31 1/2 cents a pound, also effective Wednesday, by Copper Range Co., which has not been closed by the strike.

This image shows a blank, aged, cream-colored page, likely an endpaper or flyleaf of a book. The paper has a slightly textured appearance with some minor discoloration and creases, characteristic of old paper. A small tear or hole is visible near the top center of the page. The left edge of the page shows the binding of the book, with the edges of the adjacent pages visible. The overall tone is warm and historical.

TAKE ONE-A-DAY[®] MULTIPLE VITAMINS

A SINGLE TABLET DAILY SUPPLIES ALL THE VITAMINS AN ADULT OR CHILD NORMALLY NEEDS TO TAKE

Vitamins are essential to your well-being . . . but meals alone often don't supply enough. And a shortage of vitamins can deprive anyone in your family of best health. If allowed to continue, it can even lead to serious illness.

U.S. Civil Rights Commission's Report: 'Striking Gap Between Principles and Practices' Found

Partial Text of Recommendations and Minority Objections and Proposals—Bitter Criticism of Racial Discrimination in Housing.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8 (AP).

FOLLOWING IS A PARTIAL text of excerpts from the report of the United States Commission on Civil Rights. Because of the length of the document, many portions had to be elided:

FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

VOTING THE PROBLEM

... The Commission's studies reveal that many Negroes are eager to exercise their political rights as free Americans and that they have made some progress. Our investigations have revealed further that many Negro American citizens find it difficult, and often impossible, to vote.

... It has become apparent that legislation presently on the books is inadequate to assure that all our qualified citizens shall enjoy the right to vote. There exists here a striking gap between our principles and our every-day practices.

This is a moral gap. It spills over into and vitiates other areas of our society. It runs counter to our traditional concepts of fair play. It is a partial repudiation of our faith in the democratic system. It undermines the moral basis of our national stand in international affairs. It reduces the productivity of our nation.

In the belief that new legislation is needed, we submit for consideration of the President and the Congress the following recommendations which we believe will help Americans to make good our declarations of national purpose.

APPOINTMENT OF TEMPORARY FEDERAL REGISTRARS

The Commission finds that substantial numbers of citizens qualified to vote under state registration and election laws are being denied the right to register, and thus the right to vote, by reason of their race or color. It further finds that some direct procedure for temporary federal registration for federal elections is required if these citizens are not to be denied their right to register and vote in forthcoming national elections. Some method must be found by which a federal officer is empowered to register voters for federal elections who are qualified under state registration laws, but are otherwise unable to register.

Such a temporary federal registrar should serve only until local officials are prepared to register voters without discrimination. The temporary federal registrar should be an individual located in the area involved, such as the Postmaster, United States attorney, or clerk of the Federal District Court. The fact-finding responsibilities to determine whether reasonable grounds exist to believe that the right to vote is being denied could be discharged by the Commission on Civil Rights, if extended. Because of the importance of the matter, such a temporary federal registrar should be appointed directly by the President of the United States.

RECOMMENDATION NO. 5
Therefore it is recommended that, upon receipt by the President of the United States of sworn affidavits by nine or more individuals from any district, county, parish or other recognized political sub-division of a state, alleging that the affiants have unsuccessfully attempted to register with the duly constituted state registration office, and that the affiants believe themselves qualified under state law to be electors, but have been denied the right to register because of race, color, religion or national origin, the President shall refer such affidavits to the Commission on Civil Rights, if extended.

A. The Commission shall:
1. Investigate the validity of the allegations.
2. Dismiss such affidavits as prove, on investigation, to be unfounded.

3. Certify any and all well-founded affidavits to the President and to such temporary registrar as he may designate.

B. The President up on such certification shall designate an existing federal officer or employee in the area from which complaints are received, to act as a temporary registrar.
C. Such registrar - designate shall administer the state qualification laws and issue to all individuals found qualified, registration certificates which shall entitle them to vote for any candidate for the federal offices of President, vice President, presidential elector, members of the Senate or members of the House of Representatives, delegates or commissioners for the territories or possessions, in any general, special, or primary election held solely or in part for the purpose of selecting or electing any such candidate.

D. The registrar - designate shall certify to the responsible state registration officials the names and facts of registration of all persons registered by him. Such certification shall permit all such registrants to participate in federal elections previously enumerated.

E. Jurisdiction shall be retained until such time as the President determines that the presence of the appointed registrar is no longer necessary.

DISSENT BY COMMISSIONER BATTLE

I concur in the proposition that all properly qualified American citizens should have the right to vote but I believe the present laws are sufficient to protect that right, and I disagree with the proposal for the appointment of a federal registrar which would place in the hands of the Federal Government a vital part of the election process so jealously guarded and carefully reserved to the states by the founding fathers.

PROPOSAL FOR A CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT TO ESTABLISH UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE

(By Chairman Hannah and Commissioners Heschburg and Johnson.)

The Commission's recommendation for temporary federal registration should, if enacted by Congress, secure the right to vote in the forthcoming national elections for many qualified citizens who would otherwise, because of their race or color, be denied this most fundamental of American civil rights. But the proposed measure is clearly a stopgap.

Therefore, as the best ultimate solution of the problem of securing and protecting the right to vote, we propose a constitutional amendment to establish a free and universal franchise throughout the United States.

We believe that the time has come for the United States to take the last of its many steps toward free and universal suffrage. The ratification of this amendment would be a reaffirmation of our faith in the principles upon which this nation was founded. It would reassure lovers of freedom throughout a world in which hundreds of millions of people, most of them colored, are becoming free and are hesitating between alternative paths of national development.

For all these reasons we propose the following Twenty-third Amendment to the Constitution of the United States:

ARTICLE XXIII

SECTION 1

The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state or by any person for any cause except inability to meet state age or length-of-residence requirements uniformly applied to all persons within the state, or legal confinement at the time of registration or election. This right to vote shall include the right to register or otherwise qualify to vote, and to have one's vote counted.

SECTION 2

Separate statement regarding proposed XXIII Amendment (By Vice Chairman Storey and Commissioner Carlton).

We strongly believe in the right of every qualified citizen of the United States, irrespective of his color, race, religion or national origin, to register, vote and have his vote counted. We regard full protection of these rights of suffrage by both state and federal governments necessary and proper. Therefore, we have supported and voted for all recommendations of the Commission (except the proposed XXIII amendment) to strengthen the laws and improve the administration of registration and voting procedures. However, we cannot join our distinguished colleagues in the recommendation of the proposed constitutional amendment. (These are our several reasons:

1. We believe that our Commission recommendations, if enacted into law and properly enforced, will eliminate most if not all of the restrictions on registration and voting by reason of race, color, religion or national origin.

2. On principle, proposals for constitutional amendments which would alter long-standing federal-state relationships, such as the constitutional provision that matters pertaining to the qualifications of electors shall be left to the several states, should not be proposed in the absence of clear proof that no other action will correct an existing evil. No such proof is apparent.

3. The Constitution of the United States of America presently includes sufficient authority to the Federal Government to enable it effectively to deal with denial of the right to vote by reason of race, color, religion and national origin.

4. The information and findings cited in support of the proposed amendment disclose that some illiteracy still exists, that the authoritative state statistics and studies are wholly lacking to support an important proposal, and our staff has not had the opportunity to make a thorough study of such a far-reaching proposal.

I heartily agree with the objections of Commissioners Storey and Carlton to the proposed constitutional amendment.

(Signed) JOHN S. BATTLE, Commissioner.

FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS EDUCATION THE PROBLEM

In 1954 the Supreme Court of the United States held that compulsory racial segregation in public schools is a denial of the equal protection of the laws under the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, and of the due process of law required by the Fifth Amendment. In so holding, the court did not require racial integration in the schools. What the court did hold is that publicly supported schools must be opened to all races on a non-segregated basis.

The Commission based its study of legal developments constituting a denial of the equal protection of the laws in the field of public education upon two fundamental premises:

(1) The American system of public education must be preserved without impairment because an educated citizenry is the main-stay of the republic and full educational opportunity for each and every citizen is America's major defense against the world threat to freedom.

(2) The constitutional right to be free from compulsory segregation in public education can and must be realized, for this is a government of law, and the Constitution as interpreted by the Supreme Court is the supreme law of the land.

The problem, therefore, is how to comply with the Supreme Court decision while preserving and even improving public education. The ultimate choice of each state is between finding reasonable ways of ending compulsory segregation in its schools or abandoning its system of free public education.

RECOMMENDATIONS NO. 1 (A) AND 1 (B)

Therefore, the Commission recommends:

1 (A)—That the President propose and the Congress enact legislation to authorize the Commission on Civil Rights, if extended, to serve as a clearing house to collect and make available to state and to local communities information concerning programs and procedures used by school districts to comply with the Supreme Court mandate either voluntarily or by court order, including data as to the known effects of the programs on the quality of education and the cost thereof.

1 (B)—That the Commission on Civil Rights be authorized to establish an advisory and conciliation service to assist local school officials in developing plans designed to meet constitutional requirements and local conditions, and to mediate and conciliate, upon request, disputes as to proposed plans and their implementation.

RECOMMENDATION NO. 2
2. Therefore, the Commission recommends: That the Office of Education of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare,

Big Four Forms Group to Study Arms Cut Again

10-Nation Committee Evenly Divided Between East and West.

© New York Times News Service

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8. THE BIG FOUR formally set up a 10-nation committee yesterday to begin new disarmament talks early next year.

Although the committee will be outside the United Nations, the Disarmament Commission of that body, composed of representatives of all member countries, will receive reports from the 10-member committee.

A joint announcement was made simultaneously in Washington, Paris, London and Moscow.

The committee will have five Western members, the United States, France, Britain, Canada and Italy. The five Communist bloc countries are the Soviet Union, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Rumania.

THE PRELIMINARY decision on the committee originated at the talks between Big Four foreign ministers at Geneva early this summer.

State Department officials expressed yesterday that the equal representation on the committee between East and West was not to be considered a precedent. The United States, they said, is not concerned about the form as long as talks get moving.

The Big Four asked Dag Hammarskjold, U.N. Secretary General, to call the disarmament committee together to explain to it the "nature and purpose" of the committee of 10 nations.

The four-power communique said that "the United Nations charter recognizes that disarmament matters are of world-wide interest and concern. Accordingly, ultimate responsibility for general disarmament measures rests with the United Nations."

"The setting up of the disarmament committee in no way diminishes or encroaches upon the United Nations' responsibilities in this field," the big four said. "In setting up the committee the special responsibility resting on the great powers to

Khrushchev Rags-to-Fame Hero In New Soviet Propaganda

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press News Analyst.

FIRST OF A SERIES

AS A BOY, Nikita Khrushchev was good to his mother. He attended Sunday school at the local church and recited the gospels from memory. He was a good halfback at soccer. In short, he was Nikita Khrushchev: all-Russian boy.

This is the picture of Khrushchev now emerging from his own and thousands of other words pouring from Moscow press and radio in English and other languages, in advance of his visit to the United States.

The round little man with the steely cold blue eyes will appear before Americans as the new Khrushchev, 1939 model. The advance billing portrays the Soviet Premier as anything but a sinister leader of a world conspiracy using the name Communism. On the contrary, it makes him the prototype of all success story heroes who worked their way to the top through patience, fortitude and honest toil.

When I was a boy," Khrushchev recently told a skeptical crowd of Catholics in Poland, "I attended church school and won a prize from the priest for knowing the Gospels by heart."

LATER, HE ADDED another tidbit in the making of the new Khrushchev. "I was once a rather good halfback at soccer. That was not an exclusively offensive or defensive position. It was both. Did he play against foreign teams, like the British? 'I played with good Russian workers,' snorted Khrushchev. 'I don't look like a lord, do I?'"

Khrushchev neither looked nor acted like a lord. Beginning life as a shepherd boy and coal miner, he came to epitomize the new Communist proletarian elite which rose from the wreckage of Bolshevik egalitarian deals, a true representative of Russia's new privileged class.

Khrushchev was what Russians call a "spasobny chelovek"—an able fellow. He had the physique of a Russian bear, a vast store of energy, a talent for blaming his mistakes on others and turning defeat into victory. But his beginnings were undistinguished.

Khrushchev had no part in the Soviet revolution. Not until 1918 did he join the Bolshevik party

Improvement From Within
The balance of the "goodies" and "baddies" on the St. Louis Board of Education is so precarious that it ill behooves the Post-Dispatch editorial page to make it appear any worse than it actually is.

Most observers of the board's operation will agree that Dan Schaffly has made an outstanding record, that the Rev. Mr. Hicks may do so, and that Dr. Rainey can, but it is only fair to point out that Hicks and Rainey, thus far at least, are yet to make their records.

Already on the board, however, are two members worthy of attention. It is true that Oscar Erhardt is union-oriented and sometimes talks too much, but his vote has been usually on the right side of the column and always in favor of the children.

Less conspicuous and more ambiguous is the record of James Morrell, but there is reason to believe that when the chips are down, Morrell's vote will also be in the right column.

Therefore, in my estimation, while it is important as it is always important to pick four good members at the next election, there is really more chance of improving the School Board than your recent editorial implies.

Echeal T. Feinstein

Unsanitary

The new method in St. Louis of collecting garbage with rubbish only once a week is very unsanitary. Even when garbage is wrapped in thick layers of newspaper, a fuzzy mold forms. Many people are careless in spite of instructions about wrapping. Garbage should be collected at least three times a week as formerly.

Khrushchev and Labor

George Meany, AFL-CIO president, would reject any proposal that Soviet Premier Khrushchev be invited to address the AFL-CIO's coming convention in San Francisco.

This is in accordance with the position taken by the federation's executive council. The majority of union leaders, said Mr. Meany, share his view that Khrushchev is a dictator who imposes slave labor conditions.

There is no doubt that Mr. Khrushchev's invitation was based on the belief that his visit to the United States will help to save the peace. "It will do no harm"—is the general feeling.

The captive nations, however, cannot but feel differently. The invitation of Mr. Khrushchev to visit the United States cannot but enhance his prestige in the Soviet Union and cannot but strengthen the chains he has thrown around the enslaved nations.

The position taken by the AFL-CIO executive council, therefore, is understandable and is shared, I am sure, by those who either directly or indirectly lived under the Soviet regime.

A Place for Autos

I am wondering whether anything is being done about the parking garage at the north end of the Jefferson National Expansion Memorial.

We lost the golden opportunity of building the larger parking facility on the riverfront that would have attracted many office and commercial buildings and helped our tax situation, and are now talking about apartments of doubtful acceptance, depending upon tax and financing subsidies.

Let us not also lose this chance to take care of at least some of the traffic converging at this point.

Clayton's Problems

I have just heard that the Clayton city fathers are going to attempt to put the news vendor on the corner of Forsyth and Central out of business. Ye gods, aren't taxes, Downtown, Inc., and mail order business doing enough already to paralyze local dollar traffic without the Clayton Board of Aldermen getting into the act?

Why doesn't the board get busy with important municipal business like speeding up those who use our streets to move from bedroom to office and back again and many others too numerous to mention?

If we do have to go downtown or to University City for our papers you can be sure we will also pick up our dog food, liquor, groceries, haircuts, insurance and automobiles outside Clayton.

Politics and the Schools

The 30 public school systems in St. Louis and St. Louis county will open the new academic year plagued with the same general problems that have hung over them for the last several years. Since these problems are political and not educational (although they directly affect education), prompt solutions will depend largely upon the light in which they are viewed by the people who support the schools.

In St. Louis most of the difficulties of the area's largest school system can be traced to the School Board itself. A majority of the Board as presently constituted puts political debts to ward leaders ahead of the clear needs of the children. This has led to an unnecessary large diversion of school funds to the politics-ridden Building department.

A system with unlimited revenues might be able to afford this misuse of school dollars. But when city voters turned down a proposed tax rise last April, the School Board was forced to choose between patronage and education. In too many instances patronage won out. It would not be surprising if classroom standards showed signs of slipping.

The St. Louis system has substantial building needs. At least 11 new schools are required to relieve crowding in such districts as the Dozier, Emerson and Hempstead. Additions are required at 15 other schools and 25 more need enlarged playgrounds. Sprinkler systems evidently are necessary in 133 schools that do not come under the city's 1945 building code.

A bond issue would be necessary to finance such a formidable list of capital improvements. Fortunately the St. Louis system enjoys about $135,000,000 in unused bonding capacity—more than enough to handle these projects and then some. The difficulty, however, is that bond issues require two-thirds favorable majorities, and these are hard to come by when the public has such little confidence in the School Board as it has in this one.

In St. Louis county the principal problem is one of organization. Public education in the county as a whole is undemocratically organized. Because of the uneven distribution of taxable wealth in the county, some districts have far greater ability to support schools than others. Consequently the quality of education available to youngsters in the county is dictated largely by the accident of the child's home address. Ironically, those districts with the greater tax bases provide superior opportunities on lower tax rates.

The county as a whole possesses a tax base sufficiently large to finance first-class schooling for all the children and ample to meet the capital requirements of new classrooms. The problem is how to make that tax base available for the equitable support of each child.

School district organization in the county can be changed by consolidations proposed by the County School Board; indeed that is this Board's sole duty. But the consolidations proposed last year proved to be impractical.

An alternative approach, and probably a better one politically, was recommended by the Metropolitan St. Louis Survey. This would permit the Superintendents to keep their 29 districts. But it would set up a uniform basic school levy throughout the county.

Unfortunately, such a program requires legislative and possibly constitutional changes that are politically difficult to accomplish in a county in which so many have a vested interest in the present system of unequal opportunities. Only when the county's educators educate the people to the need is there likely to be any progress.

When It Was the Five-and-Ten

In Santa Clara, Calif., a five-and-ten-cent store is devoted exclusively to gardening supplies. In the Cleveland area some 30 others are experimenting with a revolving credit system. Television sets have become standard items of merchandise in many such establishments. Soon the customer may be able to go into a dime store, purchase a fur coat—already a staple in many of them—and say, "Charge it."

Like the super-duper supermarket where an insurance policy or an automobile can be bought as readily as a radish, the five-and-dime is a phenomenon of the changing face of merchandising in mid-twentieth-century America. It has adapted itself to new buying habits and to new opportunities as they have made their appearance. Today, one of the increasingly few things it does not offer the customer is the luxury of standing in the midst of a whole storefull of goods and reflecting that one can buy anything there with a single thin dime.

Laboratory Proof

The Forest Park-Rock Island Highway represents a convincing laboratory demonstration of the urgent need to approve the Metropolitan District plan in November.

Because the highway is strictly a St. Louis municipal project, it can extend no farther than the city's jurisdiction. And unless University City decides to pick it up at the St. Louis city line, as now seems unlikely, the $4,000,000 expressway will dead-end at that point. Its usefulness will be severely impaired; Skinker-Millbrook will be a giant and continuous traffic jam.

The original concept of the Rock Island contemplated running it west and southwest through University City and Clayton to a junction with the county's Inner Belt just west of County Hospital. St. Louisans authorized their segment of the project as part of the 1955 bond issue. But Clayton and University City do not have the money to handle their stretches of the road, and in University City's case a raging controversy over the route has paralyzed the City Council.

Traffic is perhaps this area's most serious metropolitan problem, but since no single community exercises jurisdiction over the whole area no single community has the legal authority to solve the traffic problem. In the case of the Rock Island, St. Louis is trying, yet its best efforts evidently are to be thwarted. The city does not have the authority to push the route west to the Inner Belt; and given the situation in University City, the hope of co-ordination is slim indeed.

The best prospect for completing the Rock Island—and for solving such other area-wide problems as transit, planning, economic development and central police co-ordination—is the Metropolitan District plan. The Metro agency would enjoy area-wide authority, and it could plan and build in the metropolitan area.

With respect to the Rock Island, for example, the metropolitan district could fix a route through University City and Clayton, and it could provide equitable means of financing the facility. This would give the entire city-county community a first-class expressway on the north side of Forest Park connecting downtown and the suburbs. We would have a highway, not a quarrel.

Germany Looks East

"I say from deep conviction that this Germany, the new Germany, will some day be a good neighbor of Poland." So said Chancellor Adenauer in recalling the Nazi assault which detonated World War II. This was not merely a "good will" speech made to gloss over bitter memories. This man believes above all else in the unification of Europe, and it is only natural that he includes "iron curtain" Europe in his vision.

Less expected were the editorials in newspapers all over Germany. They freshened memories of Hitler days. But few, if any, used the dead Fuehrer as a scapegoat. These were the words of Die Deutsche Zeitung:

"We, and not Hitler alone! . . . Before history we are responsible too, because Hitler came to power by the parliamentary road and received overwhelming majorities in all the plebiscites. Therefore he was looked upon by the world as the acknowledged 'Fuehrer'—acknowledged by the German people—who wherever he appeared was met by frantic cheers."

It is promising for the future that present-day leaders of German opinion refuse to make postwar reforms an excuse for washing their hands of the past. Nevertheless it may be a while before Germans and Poles become very friendly. The Polish embassy in Washington bitterly recalled the events of 20 years ago, by pointing out that the war had cost Poland 6,000,000 dead—more than 20 per cent of its population—and the destruction of almost 40 per cent of all property. A satellite embassy probably could not dwell on the part of the Red Army in this destruction, or on Russia's part in the partitions of Poland.

Perhaps an agreement on the East German-Polish frontier may have to be worked out before a reunification of Germany becomes a real possibility. That is still a matter for the future. But Chancellor Adenauer's attitude—supported by a majority of West Germans as it seems to be—raises hope for such an accord. Here is not a narrow nationalist who would keep alive a constant incitement to enmity and conflict. What of those who come after him?

Desegregation Progress

The Tuesday after Labor day brought school news from the South, not all of it like that from Little Rock where bombs broke into the night. One charge was set off at the School Board's office, another at the office of the Mayor and a third blew up an automobile of the Little Rock fire chief as it stood in front of his home.

History was made in Miami, where for the first time a public school in Florida admitted four Negro pupils to classes previously attended only by white children. The school was the Miami Orchard Villa elementary school and no incidents were reported as racial desegregation made its start there. Meantime three more schools in Virginia joined the desegregation trend—one at Front Royal and two at Charlottesville, seat of the University of Virginia.

As the Little Rock bombings attest, not all the news is good news. But on the whole a great deal of progress has been made in the two years since the Arkansas capital became one of the news centers of the world. Compliance with the Supreme Court decision has advanced far beyond the point at which it stood at the start of school in September 1957. The civic equality we profess to the world is that much nearer realization.

Forty Septembers Ago

Early September brings the 40th anniversary of Woodrow Wilson's brave and historic trip by train from Washington out into the country in the hope of winning popular support for the Covenant of the League of Nations, then under attack in the Senate. On Sept. 5 the weary, ill President made a memorable appearance before a standing-room-only crowd in St. Louis's old Coliseum, then at Washington and Jefferson. In 22 days the World War I leader gave 37 addresses in 29 cities before he broke down and had to turn back at Pueblo, Colo., Sept. 25.

Without the help of radio, television or even, in most places, sound amplifying devices of any kind, Woodrow Wilson took his case for peace to the people and was making impressive headway when physical exhaustion to the point almost of complete nervous collapse overtook him. But he did not yield until after he had made this prophetic statement:

"I can predict with absolute certainty that within another generation there will be another world war if the nations of the world do not concert the method by which to prevent it."

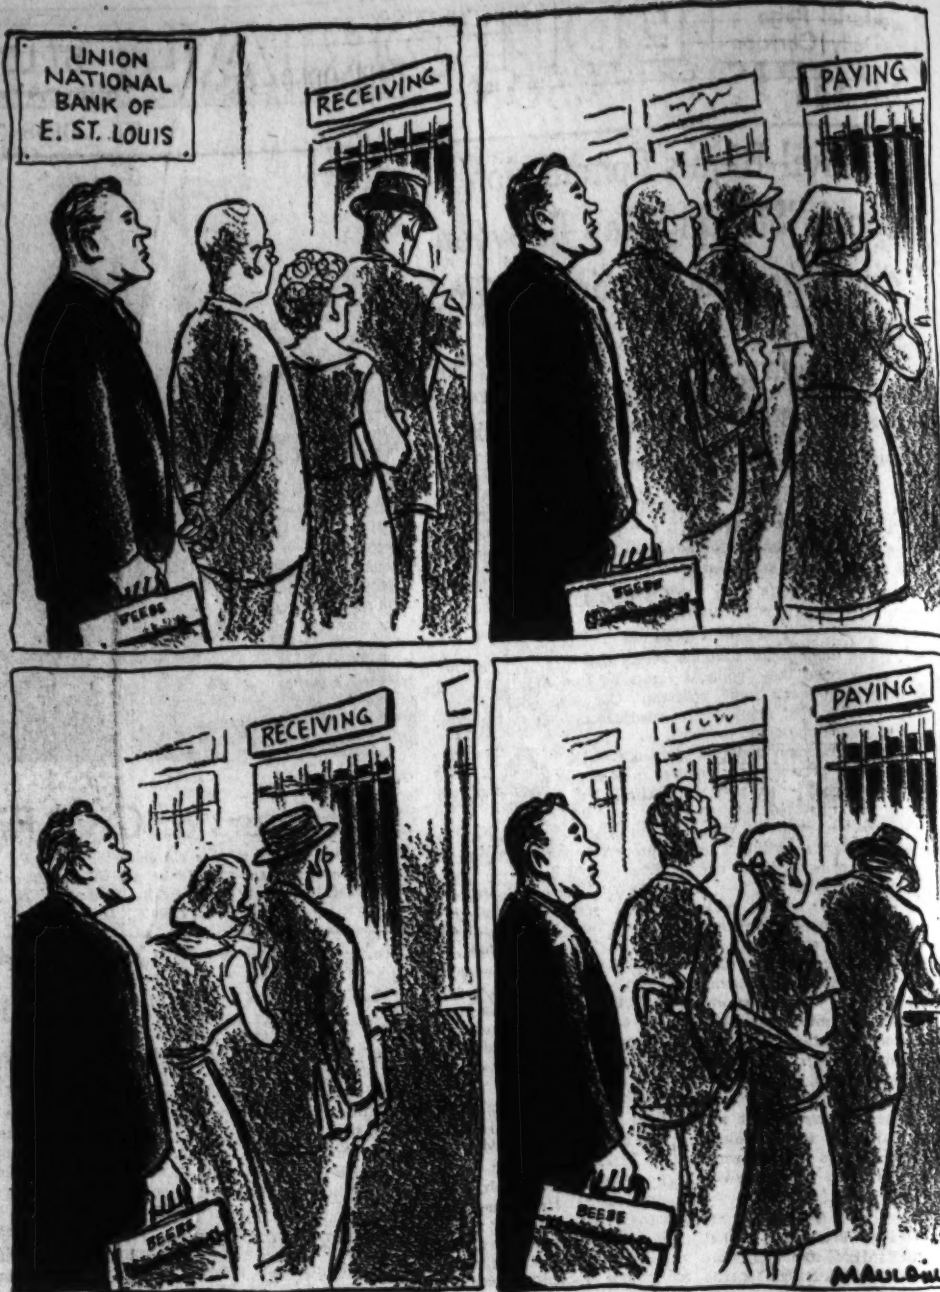

Just 20 years later came World War II because the nations of the world had not concerted the method to prevent it. It is something to remember 40 Septembers after Woodrow Wilson sounded his warning.

Man on a Tight Rope

While other Latin American leaders may receive more attention abroad, President Frondizi of Argentina is in perhaps the most precarious position. As new evidence, he has been obliged to accede to the resignation of his Secretary of War because of threats by dissident army generals.

For many months the President has been walking a tight rope between the army and its generals, on one side, and the Peronista followers of the former dictator Juan Peron, on the other. He needed Peronista support to win election; he needs army support to stay in office. The Peronistas attack his austerity program so necessary to rebuild the economy. The generals attack his moderate treatment of the Peronistas.

The situation would be impossible for a man less able than President Frondizi, and might become impossible for him. But the welfare of Argentina calls for his retention. Without a leader so dedicated to democracy and moderation, Argentina could fall toward dictatorship by the military or by the demagogues.

BUSY DAY FOR THE POLICE COMMISSIONER

Growing Deficit for the Schools

Administration Offers Niggardly School Aid Program With No Sense of Urgency

An Editorial in The Washington Post

The Administration is going through its customary ritual of calling attention to the desperate condition of the country's public school system without doing anything effectual to correct that condition.

The Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare issued an unringing appeal for congressional action on an Administration-sponsored installment plan of federal aid for building classrooms. But no one seems to suppose seriously that it has any possibility of passage in this session of Congress. And no one can pretend that it proposes to do anything more than apply a poultice to a hemorrhage.

A fortnight ago Secretary Flemming told a news conference that when the public schools open for the 1959-60 school year there will be a shortage of about 140,000 classrooms throughout the United States. The shortage a year ago at the opening of school was 140,500 classrooms. "What does this continuing neglect by the Federal Government of this classroom shortage mean in terms of the actual loss of educational opportunity?" the Secretary asked the reporters rhetorically. He answered his own question as follows:

"When there aren't enough classrooms there are generally more pupils per teacher. Educational facilities are crowded. Half-day and split sessions are imposed. There are fewer hours for children in school. Parents, teachers, children are subjected to constant frustration. A crowded classroom robs every child in that room—not just those who make up the statistical excess enrollment for the school."

Uneasy Conscience? From The Chicago Tribune

The white collar man whose office is air conditioned but whose home isn't has a problem during a hot spell. His eagerness to get to work is not —Herblock in The Washington Post.

"Quiet! We're Thinking Up a New Reason"

The Commissioner of Education, Dr. Lawrence G. Derthick, has just announced that a total of 1,563,000 teachers will be needed in both public and nonpublic schools in the coming year, whereas the number presently qualified is 1,368,000. "The deficit of teachers will mean, in many communities, over-large classes or the employment of teachers without adequate training, or both," Commissioner Derthick said. "In many instances, it will also mean curtailing the number of subjects offered."

The Administration school aid bill does not even pretend to do anything about the shortage of teachers. And it is by no means clear that it would do what it pretends to do about the shortage of classrooms. It would commit the Federal Government to pay, each year for five years, half the annual principal and interest on school bonds representing a capital outlay of $600,000,000 to be allocated among the states on the basis of school population, per capita income, and school financing efforts. The federal share of principal and interest would be $17,000,000 in the first full year of operation, rising by the fifth year to a maximum level of $85,000,000 which would be maintained until the bonds are paid off.

The virtue of this installment program is that it would not unduly swell the budget of an Administration unwilling to recommend additional taxation to meet imperative human needs. It undoubtedly represents the most that Secretary Flemming, an educator who surely understands the problem, thinks he can induce the President to approve.

In vice is that it is niggardly and inadequate; it would mortgage the future without solving the problem; it would finance, at best, hardly half of the additional classrooms admittedly needed; and the terms of financing would be unacceptable or unattainable for school districts already at the limit of their financial resources. Worst of all, perhaps, it is a program presented with so little fervor, with so slight a sense of the urgency of school needs and with so conspicuous an absence of presidential leadership or even support that it can evoke enthusiasm neither in Congress nor in the country.

Congress must bear, no doubt, a heavy burden of the blame for failure year after year to deal with the nation's school needs. But a still heavier share of blame must be shouldered by the Administration for its failure to give this problem the priority it deserves. Together, Congress and the Administration can once more, as they have done so often in the past, brush this problem under the rug. But they will be brushing under the rug about 10,000,000 American children—the number doomed to overcrowded and obsolescent classrooms in the richest nation on earth.

Between Book Ends Japanese Social Microcosm

VILLAGE JAPAN, by Richard K. Beardsley, John W. Hall, Robert E. Ward. (University of Chicago Press, 498 pp., $8.75.)

Niike is a small, rice-growing community in the southwestern portion of the main Japanese island of Honshu. In a sense it is typical of all small, rice-oriented Japanese communities. And to the authors of this book, Niike "provides extensive and useful insights into the lives, problems and attitudes of a major segment of Japan's population."

Anthropologists have long noted that the heart of a culture generally can be found in its rural areas—and this is most generally true in these areas with an old tradition. Certainly this is the case in Japan. The real core of Japanese life remains in the rural areas and in the small villages and towns dotting this rice-growing countryside.

The choice of Niike for a study of Japanese life, then, is a valid beginning point. And the authors of this excellently documented study of "village Japan" make the most of it.

Although this book may prove heavy going with its painstaking attention to detail and exactitude in recording the minutiae of life in Niike, reading it is a most rewarding task. Few communities anywhere in the world have ever been accorded such careful attention.

Despite the detail, the book is well written and presents a plausible picture of Japan for the layman as well as for the scholar. No one who takes the time to at least glance through this work, enjoy its pictures, and get to know a little of life in Niike will feel cheated.

It won't be long before the reader becomes acquainted with some of the 130 people who live in 24 houses clustered at the base of a pine-covered hill; and in becoming acquainted with the folk of Niike, he becomes acquainted with the folk of Japan.

Niike serves as a valid case study of how the Japanese rear their children, farm their fields, balance their budgets, grow in stature in the community with age, run their government, quarrel and make peace—in a word, how they live.

Messrs. Beardsley, Hall and Ward—all professors at the University of Michigan, in anthropology, history and political science, respectively—lived for four years in Niike to do this study. What they have as a result is a challenging and moving study of a Japanese social microcosm, and indeed a successful one.

ST. ODO OF CLUNY, translated and edited by Dom Gerard Sitwell, O.S.B. (Sheed and Ward, 186 pp., $4.50.)

Very few documents survive from the real Dark Age, the tenth-century Europe. We are fortunate to have two contemporary biographies and one of these a life of its most illustrious saint, Odo of Cluny. Up to date, however, this has remained in the holy obscurity of Abbe Migne's gigantic labor of editing. I mean the Latin Patrology. An obstacle to its being translated was the obscurity of its Latin, doubtless suited to the obscurity of the age. We are therefore much in Dom Gerard Sitwell's debt for his remarkable work not only of translation but also of scholarly editing this life and Saint Odo's own life of his contemporary Saint Gerald. Eisenhower Raises Great Expectations

PARIS. PRESIDENT EISENHOWER HAS NOT ALLOWED one political word to escape his lips on his venture in personal diplomacy. Nevertheless, he is defining the issue for the 1960 presidential campaign at home and starting the whole West on a path from which it cannot readily be diverted.

For the net effect of the crowded week just concluded is that the President of the United States has accepted leadership of a drive for peace in our time. The hopeful faces turned towards him from the highways and byways, the encouragement he has given British, German and French leaders to lean on the United States in the search for ways to live with the Soviet Union point only one way. Much will be expected of the President in the coming months.

While he cannot again be his party's candidate for his high office, the nominee of his party will be compelled to run on his record and not just on the intentions which he has expressed so sincerely.

Changed in a Week.

The kind of thing that has been going on here, in Bonn and in London acquires a momentum of its own which no precautions and no words of warning—and these have not been wholly absent—can halt or even slow down appreciably.

The entire atmosphere is different since the President took off little more than a week ago in the muggy dawn of a Washington summer day. He cannot return to sheltered passivity even if he should so desire.

It is not so much what he has promised to do as that he has promised to do something. He may shift and swerve, he may zig and zag, but he will not be able again merely to hold a line.

This was underscored in an unexpected way. The President saw the Spanish Foreign Minister in London and the official communiqué was pleasant but meaningless.

Meeting With Italians.

But an older and closer ally, one with important political connections in the United States—Italy—sent her Prime Minister and Foreign Minister to Paris and the conversations lasted two hours.

"Fully identity of views resulted," said the ensuing communiqué.

Then came the signpost which is agitating the diplomatic correspondents who are here in great numbers. It read: "Particular attention was devoted to the problem of disarmament and it was agreed that a controlled and balanced limitation of armaments represents the most appropriate means to guarantee peaceful relations between the East and the West."

Leeway in Congress

The President has still to talk with Soviet Premier Khrushchev about how to control and balance armaments, but something the whole world wants so much to hear will not wait upon the if's, and's or but's. Clearly the President has moved ahead of mere tribute to the principle of disarmament. How he will flush out the skeleton remains to be seen, but he has opened the closet door on it.

Press reports abroad indicate that the politicians at home are being extremely circumspect while the President travels.

He has carefully avoided provoking them, which for him is easy, as his favorite role is President of all the people, expressing in homely language their kindest thoughts and best aspirations.

True, some members of Congress have acidly expressed their dislike of the Eisenhower-Khrushchev conversations, but it is probable that Eisenhower during the remainder of this year will enjoy substantial leeway in his diplomatic operations.

Record for Candidates.

The climate is bound to change as the wide-open race for the greatest prize in the world—the American Presidency—begins. Many able men have not only ambitions for 1960; they have convictions about the course the United States should take.

If he had the wisdom of Solomon and impact of a ballistic missile, the President could not satisfy them all, in and out of his own party. His record will be there, both an opportunity and a target.

Each aspiring politician can choose how he will view it, but he cannot evade taking a position on it.

PARK OPERA DREW 648,295 IN SEASON

Total 5706 Under 1958—67,968 for 'Lil Abner' Is Tops for Week.

Municipal Opera's forty-first season, which ended Sunday night, drew a total of 648,295 persons, it was announced yesterday. The figure was 5706 less than last year's total.

Largest one-week attendance for the season was 67,968, for the production of "Lil Abner," a musical comedy.

"The King and I," by Rodgers and Hammerstein, attracted 88,031 in the first 11 nights of the season.

"The Bells Are Ringing," which closed the season, drew 100,059 to its 14 performances.

The financial outcome of the season will not be known until an audit is completed. It is not expected, however, that the 1500 guarantors who underwrote the opera this year will have to make up any deficit.

The last time the opera used its guaranty was in 1930, when the theater was completely refurbished. The loss was made up the following season.

Two shows never before seen in St. Louis were presented this year. They were "Oh Captain" and "Bells Are Ringing." Two others, "Fanny" and "Lil Abner," were given for the first time on the Forrest Park stage.

The weather co-operated this year. Only one performance was rained out. In the previous season, four performances had to be canceled because of rain.

MAURICE DUPLESSIS DIES; LONG-TIME QUEBEC PREMIER

QUEBEC CITY, Sept. 8 (UPI)—Maurice L. Duplessis, premier of Quebec since 1936, died Sunday in the mining community of Schefferville after a series of cerebral hemorrhages. He was 69 years old.

Premier Duplessis, regarded as one of the most powerful politicians in the history of Canada, had gone to Schefferville, 600 miles from here, to make a tour of mining developments. He had been in a coma most of the time since Thursday when he suffered the first of five attacks. The body was flown to Quebec yesterday.

The bachelor premier held nearly absolute rule over his province by virtue of heavy majorities.

Soprano and 'Friend' Hitting High Spots

Opera singer MARIA CALLAS and wealthy Greek shipowner ARISTOTLE ONASSIS leaving Milan (Italy) nightclub in high spirits after 5-hour champagne party.

Singer Callas, Husband Are Out Of Harmony, Plan Separation

MILAN, Italy, Sept. 8 (UPI)—Soprano Maria Callas and her husband, Battista Meneghini, are arranging a separation, attorney Cesare Bisinelli announced today.

Bisinelli, who represents Meneghini, declined to say what matters were at issue between the 36-year-old Diva and her 62-year-old industrialist husband. Italian press reports said the 10-year marriage was being scuttled by a romance between Miss Callas and Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis.

Asked what the chances were for a reconciliation, Bisinelli replied, "The possibility that this rift can be patched up can be ruled out."

At Milan's La Scala Opera House for a recording session

last night, the famed soprano told a photographer: "I would like to grab you and take your camera to pieces."

It was her second appearance at La Scala in 30 minutes. She showed up the first time with Onassis beside her, but stayed only a few minutes after apparently becoming upset by reporters' questions.

"I am very annoyed with those press reports about my personal situation," she said on her first appearance. "I will call you for a press conference, sooner or later, to tell you what I have to say."

Onassis, one of the richest men in the world, dismissed the reports of a romance between Miss Callas and himself as "childish."

Onassis said he planned to leave for Venice to join his wife, Christina, who spent last night at a party given by Elsa Maxwell.

KAY KENDALL DIES OF LEUKEMIA AT 32

Husband Rex Harrison Knew Diagnosis, Kept It From Actress.

LONDON, Sept. 8 (AP)—Actress Kay Kendall, who rose from a chorus line to film and stage stardom, died Sunday at the age of 32. She did not know she suffered from leukemia, which took her life, but her husband, actor Rex Harrison, knew it when he married her two years ago.

Miss Kendall entered the hospital eight days ago. She had been in poor health for 20 months. Dr. Carl Goldman, Miss Kendall's physician, said the star's malady was first diagnosed in New York four years ago.

Doctors, who knew that Harrison, the star of "My Fair Lady," planned to marry Miss Kendall as soon as he was divorced from actress Lilli Palmer, told him the nature of her illness.

Miss Kendall was born in York, England. Her family had a theatrical history going back four generations. She began her career in the London Palladium chorus when she was 12. Then she went into revue and during the war entertained troops.

She got her first starring role in the British film "London Town," opposite the late British comedian Sid Field. The movie was a flop but Miss Kendall caught the industry's eye.

She was starred as the trumpet-playing beauty in the comedy film "Genevieve." She was a smash hit.

Miss Kendall married Harrison in New York in 1957. It was her first marriage, his third.

Miss Kendall became ill last May in Paris. She stopped work on the film "Once More With Feeling," with Yul Brynner, and entered the London Clinic but came out soon afterward. "Once More With Feeling" was finished after that first stay in the London Clinic.

Joseph Harrington Dies.

CHICAGO, Sept. 8 (AP)—Joseph Harrington, an authority on fuel conservation and its allied field of smoke abatement, died yesterday. He was 86 years old. In World War I he was in charge of coal conservation in the 13,000 power plants in Illinois.

CHURCHES REPORT MEMBERSHIP HIGH OF 109,557,741 IN '58

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (AP)—Membership in American churches and synagogues reached a new high in 1958, according to figures released yesterday by the National Council of Churches.

Reports by church groups themselves, the council said, indicate membership for all faiths in 1958 was 109,557,741. This is 63 per cent of the nation's estimated population of 173,374,000, the highest ratio of church membership to population in American history.

The membership gain of all churches last year was 5,368,063, a rise of 5 per cent over 1957. This compares to a 1.7 per cent increase in the nation's population for the same period, the council said.

Church membership by major groupings for 1958 was: Protestant, 61,504,669; Roman Catholic, 39,509,508; Jewish, 5,500,000, and Eastern Orthodox, 2,545,318.

3 ST. LOUISANS TO ATTEND MEETING WITH EISENHOWER

Three St. Louisans are members of a delegation of church leaders who will meet with President Eisenhower tomorrow in Washington to hear the President's personal report on his European trip and an analysis of world problems.

St. Louisans who will attend the conference are: the Rev. Dr. O. Walter Wagner, executive director of the Metropolitan Church Federation; the Rev. Dr. Edwin T. Dahlberg, president of the National Council of Churches, and J. Clinton Hawkins, president of the United Church Men of America.

Church leaders of 31 denominations were invited to attend the meeting. They will meet with the President at noon tomorrow. At 3 p.m. Secretary of State Christian Herter will give the church men an opportunity to exchange views with him on the international issues.

D. Leigh Colvin Dies.

BRONXVILLE, N. Y., Sept. 8 (AP)—D. Leigh Colvin, a leader of the prohibition movement for more than half a century and prohibition candidate for the presidency in 1936, died yesterday. He was 79 years old. His wife, who died in 1955, was president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union for many years.

ACTOR EDMUND GWENN DIES, FAMOUS FOR ST. NICK ROLE

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 8 (UPI)—Edmond Gwenn, whose role as St. Nick in "The Miracle on 34th St." brought him an academy Award 12 years ago, died Sunday night at the Motion Picture Hospital. He would have been 82 years old Sept. 26.

Although type-cast in the minds of movie-goers as Santa Claus, Mr. Gwenn actually got his start in his teens and earned the praise of playwright George Bernard Shaw.

Mr. Gwenn impressed Shaw by his performance in an obscure one-act play in London. Shaw offered the young actor a prominent role in his new play, "Man and Superman." So impressed was Shaw with the actor's work in the 1895 performance that he starred Mr. Gwenn in five other works, including "Heartbreak House," and "Pygmalion." These successes brought Mr. Gwenn leading roles from noted playwrights James M. Barrie and John Galsworthy. Mr. Gwenn made more than 75 movies in Hollywood before arthritis forced him into retirement.

'BALLET: U.S.A.' THE HIT OF EDINBURGH FESTIVAL

EDINBURGH, Scotland, Sept. 8 (AP)—Jerome Robbins' "Ballet: U.S.A." was the hit of the Edinburgh Music Festival here last night. Critics agreed that something new, and thoroughly American, had overtaken ballet.

The 20 American dancers lost their costumes and most of their scenery in an airplane which crashed in the Mediterranean Saturday.

The appearance of the dancers in their practice clothes seemed to give realism to their performance. The company's triumph was roundly applauded at the Empire Theater. Robbins appeared on the stage to apologize for the lack of props and to promise to explain before each item "what scenery we did have." There were four ballets, all by Robbins.

Ex-Redbird Jones Sets Down Cardinals for His 19th Victory

Giants Run Advantage In Games To 15-4

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—Sam Jones, an old Redbird, came back again to bite the hands that once fed him when he defeated the Cardinals, 4-2, yesterday and enabled the Giants to maintain their three-game lead in the National League.

A capacity Seals Stadium crowd of 22,815, alternately broiling in a hot sun and shivering before a brisk breeze off the ocean, saw the 33-year-old right-hander become the third 19-game winner in the majors. Jones, who never had won more than 14, pulled even with his left-handed Giant teammate, Johnny Antonelli, and Milwaukee's Lew Burdette.

The triumph also gave the Giants the final 1959 West Coast series and the season's advantage in games, 15-4. Larry Jackson squared the series at one-all Sunday by shutting out the Giants on a five-hitter, 1-0.

Jones' victim was gangling Bob Gibson, the former Harlem Globetrotter basketball player. Gibson pitched well until the fourth, narrowly escaped in the fifth, and went out in the sixth.

Nine Fanned by Jones. The Giants outlasted the Cards, 10-7, as Jones, the defending strikeout champion of the league, whiffed nine men to jump his total to 180.

Only one home run was hit and little Curt Flood did the doing. Flattened by a Jones hummer in the second inning, and ultimately struck out, Curt came back in the fourth to belt a 370-foot homer, his sixth, and then doubled in the sixth inning.

Two streaks of prominence were extended during the contest. Ken Boyer singled in the eighth to run his consecutive game-hitting string to 25. Willie McCovey, San Francisco's sensational rookie, singled in the sixth to extend his streak to 20, four shy of the Giants' record.

A leadoff walk to Don Blasingame set up the game's first run. Jones threw the ball away trying to pick off the Blazer, and Joe Cunningham singled him to third. Bill White then grounded to second baseman Danny Spencer who threw to first, retiring the batter. Cunningham apparently was trapped between first and second but collided with Spencer.

The umpires ruled obstruction, said Cunningham was trying to get back to first and awarded him the base. Boyer hit into a force play and Jones promptly picked him off first.

With two down in the fourth, Flood hit his home run off Jones and made the score 2-0.

Bad Throws Hurt Birds. The Giants tallied in their half of the fourth on successive singles by Orlando Cepeda, Willie Kirkland and Spencer. Additional damage was avoided as Gibson, proving he doesn't lack heart, got key strikeouts on Catcher Hobie Landrih and Pinch-hitter Dusty Rhodes.

But Gibson, after escaping a bases-loaded, two-out situation in the fifth, ran out of gas, and luck. Before Manager Solly Hemus could go out and get him, Bob was tagged for two runs.

Eddie Bressoud opened the inning with a single. Jones bunted and both runners were safe as Boyer's throw to second went into short center. Joe Pagan bunted and Jones was thrown out at second. On a try for the double play, shortstop Alex Grammas threw a wild one to first.

Willie Mays fouled to the catcher but another run scored as McCovey and Cepeda followed with singles. Reliever Lindy McDaniel took over and fanned Kirkland for the third out.

A Bressoud double between White and Flood, after two were out, and a single up the middle by Jones off McDaniel in the seventh closed out the score. Jones closed out the series by claiming six of his nine strikeouts in the last five innings. He fanned pinch-hitters Wally Shannon and George Crowe for the last two outs.

The Redbirds have today off. They play tomorrow night in Milwaukee.

Jamin to Compete In $50,000 U.S. Race. WESTBURY, N.Y., Sept. 8 (AP)—French trotting champion Jamin, winner of the $50,000 international at Roosevelt Raceway on Aug. 1, accepted the first invitation to compete in the $50,000 American trotting championship here Sept. 18.

Jamin, since winning the international, has recorded time trial marks of 1:58.45 at Du Quoin, Ill., and 2:00.35 at Springfield, Ill. The six-year-old is the fastest mile ever achieved by a European trotter.

Edwardsville Wins. Edwardsville defeated Devereaux Heights of Springfield, Ill., 3-1, to win the Litchfield softball tournament for the second year. Sixteen teams were entered from St. Louis and Illinois.

Their Consecutive Homers Tie Record

Redbird Notes

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 8.—Solly Hemus, asked if he believed his Cardinals would be a pennant contender next year, replied: "Why not? I think we've strengthened our bullpen since last spring, our defense should be better, and well... we could use a little more power and we're going to go to work on that pretty soon."

Larry Jackson limited the Giants to just five singles to win a pitching duel against youthful lefthander Mike McCormick in the second game of the series. He fanned six and didn't issue a walk. McCormick gave up just four hits before leaving in favor of a pinch-hitter in the eighth.

The only run of the game, scored by the Cards in the same inning, was unearned. Don Blasingame singled after one was out. Left fielder Orlando Cepeda's throw went all the way to second base and Blasingame reached third on the error. Alex Grammas bunted along the third-base line, scoring the Blazer as McCormick threw out the runner at first.

Two more Redbirds have been added to the recall list and will join the parent club in Milwaukee. They are Pitcher Bob Blaylock and Outfielder Leon Carmel of Tulsa. They will report along with Jeff Long, a pitcher from Keokuk, and Tim McCarver, a catcher, and Gene Green, a catcher-outfielder, from Rochester.

The Cards also announced the signing of Phil Gagliano, a 17-year-old shortstop of Memphis, Tenn., who batted .333 and .375 in three years of high school and Junior American Legion ball. He will report to the Billings (Mont.) farm club in the Class D rookie league next spring.

Giants, Sox Pass Milestone in Stride

CHICAGO, Sept. 8 (UPI)—The Chicago White Sox and San Francisco Giants, frisky front-runners in the major league pennant races, galloped past the Labor day marker with history and the odds makers on their side.

During the last 10 years only one American League team (Cleveland in 1955) faltered in the stretch after leading the field on Labor day. In the National League, the Labor day pace-setter has appeared in the World Series seven times in the last decade. The "quitters" were the Braves in 1956, the Dodgers in 1951, and the Cardinals in 1949.

Broadway odds makers also feel certain now that it will be a White Sox-Giants world series. In their revised quotations, they listed the Chicks as whopping 1-10 favorites for the American League flag and pegged the Giants at 1-3 in the National League. The odds against the Dodgers and Braves catching Bill Rigney's slugers are 5-1.

The White Sox maintained the four-and-one-half game lead over Cleveland yesterday by downing the Kansas City Athletics twice, 2-1 and 13-7, while the Indians swept their holiday twin bill with the Detroit Tigers, 15-4, and 6-5. The Washington Senators clubbed the Baltimore Orioles, 8-1, in 10 innings after dropping the opener, 7-0, and the Boston Red Sox whipped the New York Yankees in a single game, 12-4. The Yankees are 17 games behind with 17 to play.

In the National League race, Sam Jones pitched the Giants to a 4-2 victory over the Cardinals. The Braves tied the Dodgers for second place, three games back of San Francisco, by taking a pair from the Pirates, 5-1 and 7-1, while Los Angeles beat the Cubs, 7-1, and the Philadelphia Phillies downed the Cincinnati Reds, 6-4, in single games.

Big Kls Help. Ted Kluszewski had a big hand in both White Sox triumphs, the husky National League castoff singled home a key run in the opener and then drove in five runs with two homers and a sacrifice fly in the nightcap.

Billy Pierce, making his first start since suffering a bruised hip three weeks ago, limited Kansas City to five hits before giving way to Turk Lown in the seventh inning of the opener. Al Smith and Jim Rivera also homered for the White Sox in the second game.

The Indians won both their games with three-run, ninth-inning rallies. In the opener, Jim Piersall singled home the tying and winning runs off Jim Bunning after the Indians had trailed by as much as 12-4.

Soccer Is Success In Pan-Am

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—A free-for-all between Haiti and Mexican players in the first half, provided most of the excitement in the closing day of the soccer series of the third Pan-American Games.

Gustavo Cuenca of Mexico, and Germain Champagne of Haiti became involved in a mix-up as both rushed to reach a ball on the touch line. Both players resorted to throwing punches, which precipitated a general melee, with players rushing from the bench to join in the fight. After police restored order the two culprits were ejected and the teams resumed play with 10 men each.

Haiti scored three times in the first half with the aid of a strong wind. Chard Din Delices, Germain Champagne and Gerard Delpeche tallied the goals. Delpeche added his second score in the second half and Jesus Mercado averted a shut out for Mexico in the last eight minutes. Final score Haiti 4, Mexico 1. Costa Rica rallied for two goals in the second half to win over Cuba, 2 to 1.

The soccer series was rated as an outstanding success by officials of the Pan-American Games, drawing over 25,000 fans, second in attendance only to track and field. Soccer attendance topped the next closest sport by 10,000 or more.

Prospects for the United States in the coming Olympics are very encouraging, based on the results of the Pan-Am tourney. Without question the United States has a fine front line. Al Zerhusen of Los Angeles, tied with Jose Da Silva of Brazil, with 10 goals for high scoring honors. Ed Murphy of Chicago, was next with eight and Bill Looey of St. Louis was in fifth place with six. The injury to John Traina hurt United States replacement value in the wing half positions, but the defense was solid and well balanced.

Fewer personal fouls were called against the United States than any other team.

Lip Service

It might be all right to keep a stiff upper lip in the face of adversity, but it's apparently a lot wiser to keep a loose lower lip if you're trying to run away from trouble. Or just running.

Authority for the amazing assertion that relaxed running is the fastest is Ray Norton, the only triple gold-medal winner in the Pan-American track and field meet.

Norton, tall California sprinter who plays football at San Jose State College, won the 100 and 200-meter dashes and anchored a victorious United States relay team. Although Pan-Am records were broken regularly, the sprint star was the only performer to match a world track standard. He did the 200 in 20.6 seconds.

The lithe athlete, who said he could pick up 10 pounds to 185 in a week, learned his running technique from Bud Winter, a sun-scorched coach who built a fine track team at San Jose State on a $200 budget and no scholarships.

Werner taught Norton to relax "before, after and even during a race," Ray said the other afternoon at Chicago, explaining:

"I run with my mouth open, my lower lip loose, my teeth not quite clenching. My hands also are not quite closed, either."

The way Winter sees it, "If a runner's lower lip is relaxed and flopping when he runs, his upper body is loose. If his hands are relaxed, his arm muscles are relaxed."

"You've got to run relaxed to get maximum speed. If you have antagonistic muscles

Slow Up Faster

Norton illustrated how Werner's theory worked. "I've seen Coach take a kid who can run pretty good and time him over a 30-yard dash, running all-out three or four times in a row, always in about three seconds. Then he'll tell the sprinter, 'Okay, now do it at four-fifths speed. Don't strain.'"

The San Jose speed champion smiled. "Nine times out of 10, thinking he's running eased up a bit, the kid will relax," said Norton. "When you show him the watch, he won't believe it. He'll have done the 30 yards

McKinley Reaches Fourth Round of U. S. Tennis Singles

Olmedo Is Next Opponent

FOREST HILLS, N.Y., Sept. 8 (UPI)—Chuck McKinley, 18-year-old junior star from St. Louis, gained the fourth round of the United States tennis singles championships today by whipping Antonio Palafox of Mexico, 6-3, 4-6, 10-12, 6-4, 6-4, in the playoff of a match postponed from yesterday.

McKinley will meet top-seeded Alex Olmedo of Peru in his next match.

Down two sets to one when darkness halted play yesterday, the tenacious McKinley scored key service breaks on errors by Palafox in both the wrap-up sets played today.

Earl (Butch) Uchholz, McKinley's St. Louis buddy, bids for a berth in the quarterfinals in another leading match today. Vic Seixas, an "old man" of the courts who plays only weekend tennis, sought to follow in the title footsteps of Big Bill Tilden after scoring the biggest upset of the tournament.

Laver Advances.
Fourth-seeded Rod Laver of Australia, nursing a variety of ailments, went into the quarterfinals by defeating national collegiate champion, Whitney Reed, of Alameda, Calif., 6-1, 6-4, 5-7, 6-4.

Laver, 21-year-old Aussie Davis Cupper, was handicapped by a bruised heel, a groin injury and an upset stomach, but he had too much power in the clutches for the 26-year-old Reed.

Reed, former service champion who won the N.C.A.A. singles crown for San Jose State this year, used his assortment of weird shots to disorganize Laver in the third set, which he won by breaking Rod's service at love in the final game. After a rest, however, Laver came back to score a service break for a 3-2 lead in the fourth set and held grimly thereafter.

Tilden, at 36, was the oldest winner of the Nationals. But Seixas at the same age showed he might be ready and able as well as willing to match that feat when he blasted aside fifth-seeded Ramanathan Krishnan of India yesterday.

It was the biggest of three upsets—two seeded foreign women also losing at Forest Hills—as the handsome Philadelphia native scored a smashing 6-3, 6-4, 6-2 victory over the classy Indian whose titles include the United States hard court championship.

Bowing out with Krishnan went fifth-seeded Angela Mortimer of England and seventh-seeded Renee Schuurman of South Africa. Sixteen-year-old Karen Hantze of San Diego, protégé of former Queen Maureen Connolly, scored over Miss Mortimer, 6-4, 6-4, and Shirley Bloomer Brasher of England eliminated Miss Schuurman, 6-3, 6-4.

Aside from those casualties, the seeded stars moved along as expected. These included Peru's Alex Olmedo, Uncle Sam's Barry MacKay and Earl (Butch) Uchholz and such foreign threats as Chile's Luis Ayala and Australian Davis Cuppers Neale Fraser, Roy Emerson and Rod Laver.

Buchholz, of St. Louis, 18-year-old "baby" of the United States Davis Cuppers, won over Don Dell of Bethesda, Md., 6-4, 6-4.

Rolls Over Yale Star.
The towering Buchholz, seeded seventh in the Nationals, had to cope with high wind and 80-degree heat but rolled over the 21-year-old Yale star almost effortlessly. His big service was the deciding factor, permitting him to go to the net at will as, driving powerfully, he kept Dell on the defensive.

Buchholz, with Karen Hantze, San Diego, won a mixed doubles match, beating Mrs. Harry Hopman and Ken Fletcher, both of Australia, 6-2, 6-3.

MacKay whipped Crawford Henry of Atlanta, 6-3, 8-6, 7-5.

Maria Bueno, the 19-year-old Wimbledon champion from Sao Paulo, Brazil, who is the favorite to capture the women's crown, escaped the upset wave as she dusted off Janet Hopps of Seattle, 6-4, 6-2, to show the way into the third round. With her went fourth-ranked Darlene Hard of Montebello, Calif., last year's runnerup, with a 6-4, 6-4 win over Carmen Lampe of New York.

But the man of the day was Seixas, the one-time fighter pilot who captured the Wimbledon title in 1953 and the United States crown in 1954 at the belated age of 31. Since then the long-time Davis Cup star has settled down to being a successful business man who plays only "occasional" tennis.

Yet he had all that old touch and pace on the famed center court as he bested the young Indian who wasn't born until eight years after Vic started playing tennis.

"I feel," Vic said afterward, "that physically I am capable of winning. I didn't tire and I had a good touch. But, it's funny after all my years of tennis, the thing I notice most is nervousness at playing before a large gallery."

He didn't show it as he roared back, when seemingly headed for

Chicago Cardinals Fly Here Tomorrow

The surprising Chicago Cardinals, who have won four of five pre-season games, will fly in tomorrow from the West Coast and conclude drills for Friday night's benefit contest with the Pittsburgh Steelers at Busch Stadium.

The Steelers, however, aren't expected until Thursday from their California (Pa.) training base, where they have been since giving the world champion Baltimore Colts an all-out battle before losing, 30-21, at Miami last week.

The seventh annual exhibition contest in St. Louis, for the benefit of the Cardinal Glennon Memorial Hospital, will begin at 8:30 p.m. Game chairman Norman George said that plenty of $2 reserved grandstand and $1 bleacher seats still are available at the stadium and the Arcade Building.

Both the Cardinals and Steelers will practice at Washington U. for their repeat meeting here.

Frank Ivy's Cardinals will arrive from Seattle, Wash., where they came from behind to stun the San Francisco Forty-Niners, 27-24, last weekend. The Texas A. & M. pair of John David Crow and Bobby Joe Conrad led the Cards to their thrilling triumph, the former running 19 yards for a TD and the latter booting two quick defeat, to turn aside his swarthy rival, Krishnan had jumped into a 3-0 lead in games and a 40-love lead on his own service when Vic came to life. Fighting for every point and racing over the tattered turf like a youngster, he won five straight points to break Krishnan's service.

That was the first of three straight breaks as Seixas, losing only seven points in the six games, ran it out. From there it was no contest, with the wily veteran in full command. And you couldn't tell those worried youngsters that the classy Philadelphia might not be troubled all the way, with Tut Bartzon of Dallas as his next opponent tomorrow.

Devine Cheered By Films

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

COLUMBIA, Sept. 8 — Coach Dan Devine found some cheer in studying movies of the Missouri Tigers' first scrimmage, in which the top two teams Saturday scored a 27-6 win over reserves.

"Although it was hot, we were able to go through the whole practice without a major injury of any type, an indication the boys are in pretty good shape," he said.

Only Phil Snowden, No. 1 quarterback, was unable to participate in yesterday's workouts, designed to correct mistakes made in the scrimmage. Snowden was banged up and skipped contact sessions.

Beal Returns.
Norman Beal, highly regarded Normandy sophomore back, returned after a layoff because of injury. But Gordon Smith, sophomore end, skipped serious phases of practice because of a nose fracture suffered a week ago.

While Devine was encouraged by conditioning of his squad, he said that the films showed a lot of mistakes. "It was encouraging that most of the mistakes can be corrected to a degree," he said. "But it was discouraging because a good football player doesn't make them."

The two most glaring mistakes were poor blocking by backs and lack of pursuit by linemen, he said.

Blocking Must Improve.
Practice yesterday was lighter than usual because of the 87-degree heat. The contact work was designed to correct errors. Some attention was given to punting with Bob Haas, Danny LaRose and Beal doing the booting. The Tigers worked on defense against the type of offense expected from the opening opponent, Penn State.

Devine said that film studies showed that the blocking on offense and passing were "not too bad" in the scrimmage Saturday.

Five First Downs.
In that game, the varsity held the scrubs to five first downs and scored four times itself. Passes accounted for major gains on all touchdown drives, and two of the scores came from passes, one a 13-yarder from Bob Haas to End Tom Carpenter and the other a 25-yard toss from reserve quarterback Ron Roman to reserve End Tom Smith.

Mel West, No. 1 left halfback, scored the other two counters on three-yard runs.

to Cigar Smokers

The vast majority of popular priced (5c to 25c) cigars are now being made with the new manufactured sheet binder. Most cigars costing 15c or more are still made with natural leaf binder.

The King Edward brand has both. The IMPERIAL (6c) is made with the very mild, smooth burning Perfection binder and is our largest seller. It is an excellent cigar in every respect and we are proud to recommend it.

The INVINCIBLE DELUXE (25c) is one of the few popular priced cigars still made with all natural leaf tobacco. Here you have the rich aroma and taste of the properly cured and aged tobacco that made King Edward the largest selling cigar in the world. The size is larger than average and the end should not come apart while smoking. It is, in our opinion, the finest quality cigar value on the market.

SEAGRAM DISTILLERS COMPANY, N.Y.C. 94 PROOF, DISTILLED DRY GIN, DISTILLED FROM AMERICAN GRAIN

HIGHER PROOF at no extra cost DRY-ER PROOF
HOW DOES SEAGRAM'S MAKE A BETTER GIN? At the point where other gins are bottled, Seagram's gin is put away to rest. This costlier extra step takes out the harshness but not the life—removes the bite but not the spirit. And for even more zest, we made this gin 94 proof—a full four points higher and drier than the usual. In fact, any gin drier simply wouldn't pour! Tonight, invigorate that martini with SEAGRAM'S GOLDEN GIN.

United States Won 121 of 164 Gold Medals in Pan-Am Games

Captured 26 of 32 In Track

CHICAGO, Sept. 8 (UPI)—The third Pan-American Games turned out to be an overwhelming triumph for the United States, but did not turn out to be much of a testing ground for its 1960 Olympic chances.

Piling up 121 gold medals of the 164 up for decision, the United States crushed the opposition from 23 other nations in the games which closed yesterday—but it was not as glittering a triumph as the final count indicated.

Charles McCaffree, coach of the United States men's swimming team, summed it up when he said:

"There was so little real competition that I had a terrific time keeping our boys in top condition. Sure, we set a lot of records, but we're still behind the Japanese and Australians."

Other United States Pan-American coaches, while lauding the performances of their teams, also discounted the star spangled victories. In track and field, the United States won 26 of 32 events, but Russia was not competing and the Soviet has been a big thorn for the United States in that sport, just as Australia and Japan have been in swimming.

The games wound up Monday when the United States won the equestrian Prix de Nations, its third gold medal in the sport. Brazil was second and Cuba third.

Finished as They Started. It was the only gold medal decided on the final day—and by winning it the United States finished as it started—a victor. That was back on Aug. 28 when Albert Hall of Southington, Conn., won the hammer throw, hours after it was over because of one of the many disputes which marked the games.

The United States final victory came easily. It had wrapped up the Grand Prix before its final rider got on his horse.

That's how it was all along. When it was all over in Soldier Field, before a crowd of 50,000 on a sweltering day, Mayor Richard J. Daley officially proclaimed the games ended.

In addition to its 121 gold medals, the United States picked up 37 silver (second place) medals and 52 bronze (third place) medals.

How the U.S. Fared.

Here's how the United States did in the 1959 games.

Men's Track and Field—Led by Ray Norton, San Jose State, the United States won 18 of 22 gold medals. Norton won the 100 meter and 200 meter dashes, and anchored the winning 400-meter relay team. David Edstrom, Sherwood, Ore., won the decathlon, the toughest event of the games.

Women's Track and Field—United States won eight of 10 gold medals, led by double winners Luciene Brown, Los Angeles, and Lucinda Williams, Nashville, Tenn. Mrs. Brown won the discus and shot put and Miss Williams the 100 and 200 meter dashes. Wanda Wejzgowicz of St. Louis was third in the shot put.

Women's Swimming—Fifteen-year-old Chris Von Saltza, Saratoga, Calif., won five gold medals to lead the United States to a sweep of 10 events. Miss Von Saltza won the 100 meter, 200 meter and 400 meter free styles, and anchored the winning 400 meter free style relay and 400 meter medley relay teams.

Men's Swimming—United States won nine of 10 gold medals, losing only in platform diving, which Arturo Gaxiola of Mexico won.

Boxing—Four of 10 gold medals.

Equestrian—Three of five gold medals.

Fencing—Six of seven gold medals.

Gymnastics, Men—Eleven of 20 gold medals.

Gymnastics, Women—United States won two of six gold medals. (This was competition only between the United States and Canada.)

Rowing—Six of seven gold medals.

The Syracuse University eight-oared crew kept intact the United States record of not losing an international eight-oared rowing event since 1920.

Shooting—United States won 17 of 18 gold medals, led by Lt. Dan Boone Puckel, 26, Fort Benning, Ga., who won nine gold medals and two silver medals.

Wrestling—United States won all eight classes.

Weightlifting—United States won six of seven.

Yachting—United States won two of seven classes.

Tennis—Althea Gibson, New York, won singles tennis title.

Modern Pentathlon—United States won team title.

Skiing—United States won team title.

Cycling—United States won disputed decision in 4000 meter team pursuit.

Muny Baseball Playoffs Down To Four Teams

A pair of intra-league battles next Sunday will narrow the field to two or three teams in the Municipal baseball playoffs. Defending Champion Kutis North, undefeated in the playoffs, will meet Carondelet Sunday Morning Athletic Club in a match between Traveling League teams, and Hoffmeister will play the finishers in the Heine Meine League.

Admission will be charged for the doubleheader at Fairground Park diamond No. 1.

Kutis dropped Hoffmeister to the losers' bracket, 7-5, breaking a 5-5 tie in the eighth on Pete Vitale's double, Hal McBride's single, an infield out and an error.

C.S.M.A.C. eliminated the Kimmicks, 1-0. Wally Holder's five-hitter bested Mal Murphy's five-hitter on Mary Stender's single and John Maltagliati's double in the fourth.

The Villas knocked out Scullin, 10-4, with a seven-run seventh inning that included Bill Funkhouser's triple and Bob Hantak's bases-loaded home run.

$499,612 Is Bet at Fairmount

With 10,143 fans in attendance, E. M. Tarpening's Georg Tiger, a five-year old, captured the one mile and a sixteenth Labor Day Purse, featured race on yesterday's holiday program at Fairmount Park.

The crowd was one of the largest paid turnouts in the history of the Collinsville track. The mutual handle of $499,612 was the second highest since night thoroughbred racing was introduced in 1950. The biggest handle was in 1953 when $525,282 passed through the mutual machines.

The $41,262 daily double pool set a new record. The previous high was $35,118. Charley Dickey, piloting Georg Tiger, a fast finisher, followed the pace until the field moved into the stretch. The son of Flying Vale and Flicka, as far back as fifth, started to move at the half-way mark. Entering the stretch, in second place he passed Equimore near the finish to win by four lengths. Georg Tiger paid $11.60.

Favored Equimore refunded only $2.80 for place and $2.60 for show. Imported Worthington from Cleveland's Randall was third. Air Battle, with a record of five victories, five seconds and seven thirds, finished seventh.

Partlow Farms' Polo ($13.20) covered the mile and five-eighths in 2:48 1/5 while winning the ninth race to better the old mark at 2:48 4/5 set in 1942. Three lengths behind Polo was Donald O and then came Bookworm.

The largest handle was on the sixth race when $59,644 was bet. Here's Jake was the winner and refunded $40, the largest payoff of the day.

Major Tee ($8.40) and Sally H ($13.80) were ridden to the victory circle in the first and second races by Jockey Ray Landig. The double paid $46.20.

Landig's two firsts gave him a total of 26. The leader, Hector Viera, rode one winner, Here's Jake. Hector Sanabria was up on two victors, Polo and Siro ($20) pacesetter all the way in the seventh.

Fairmount will be "dark" Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights, with racing being resumed Friday night at 8:30 p.m.

in co-operation with the Bureau of the Census of the Department of Commerce, conduct an annual school census that will show the number and race of all students enrolled in all public educational institutions in the United States, and compile such data by states, by school districts and by individual institutions of higher education within each state. Further, that initially this data be collected at the time of the taking of the next decennial census, and thereafter from official state sources insofar as possible.

SUPPLEMENTARY STATEMENT ON EDUCATION

Although the portion of the report dealing with public education contains much interesting material, the text preceding the findings and recommendations is, to a large extent, argumentative and colored by the author's views of the sociological and philosophical aspects of the school integration problem. It is based largely upon information supplied by school officials from five large "border" cities which have integrated their schools. These officials appear to take pride in their accomplishment and constitute special pleaders for their cause. Little acknowledgment has been given to different conditions found in large areas of the country where the problem is most acute.

Further study and investigation should be made of the areas where school integration efforts run counter to long-established customs and traditions that formerly had legal sanction.

This tremendously serious and complex problem will not be solved by hasty action but must have the most careful and sympathetic consideration, with due regard for the way of life of large numbers of loyal Americans.

PROPOSAL TO REQUIRE EQUAL OPPORTUNITY AS A CONDITION OF FEDERAL GRANTS TO HIGHER EDUCATION

(By Chairman Hannah and Commissioners Nesburgh and Johnson.)

More than $2,000,000,000 a year of federal funds go for educational purposes and to educational institutions. The principal recipients of these funds are the nation's colleges, universities, and other institutions of higher education. Whether tax-supported or privately financed, they receive federal grants and loans both for their general support and capital improvements as well as for research projects, special programs and institutes.

Discriminatory admission policies and other practices are known to exist in a number of such institutions. None of the federal agencies administering these educational assistance programs requires proof or an attestation of non-discrimination by the institutions as a condition for the receipt of federal funds.

With its duty to "appraise the laws and policies of the Federal Government with respect to equal protection of the laws under the Constitution," the Commission was compelled to ask whether it is consistent for the Federal Government to aid and support educational programs and activities in institutions of higher education which are not open to all citizens on an equal and nondiscriminatory basis.

We believe that it is inconsistent with the Constitution and public policy of the United States for the Federal Government to grant financial assistance to institutions of higher education that practice racial discrimination.

We recommend that federal agencies act in accordance with the fundamental constitutional principle of equal protection and equal treatment, and that these agencies be authorized and directed to withhold funds in any form to institutions of higher learning, both publicly supported and privately supported, which refuse, on racial grounds, to admit students otherwise qualified for admission.

SEPARATE STATEMENT ON CONDITIONAL FEDERAL GRANTS FOR HIGHER EDUCATION

(By Vice Chairman Storey and Commissioners Battle and Carlton.)

We oppose the recommendation that federal agencies be authorized to withhold all public funds from institutions of higher learning (public and private) which refuse, on racial grounds, to admit students otherwise qualified for admission for the following reasons:

1. The Commission has agreed that the preservation and improvement of education is a matter of great national interest, and is a fundamental principle within which the problems of equal protection must be evaluated. Therefore, we cannot conscientiously endorse a program which might well undermine that principle.

2. Present problems of equal protection pertaining to education fall within the sweep of the Fourteenth Amendment, an area long since preempted by the courts. We cannot endorse a program of economic coercion as either a substitute for or a supplement to the direct enforcement of the law through the orderly processes of justice, as administered by the courts.

3. Such a proposal by this Commission—as a branch of the Federal Government—would drastically affect the administration of privately owned institutions of higher education. Such action goes beyond the scope of the Commission's duties.

4. Our staff studies were directed toward understanding and evaluation of equal protection problems in public and secondary schools, not private schools upon any level, and not institutions of higher education, whether public or private.

FINDINGS AND RECOMMENDATIONS HOUSING THE PROBLEM

First, a considerable number of Americans, by reason of their color or race, are being denied equal opportunity in housing. A large proportion of colored Americans are living in overcrowded slums or blighted areas in restricted sections of our cities, with little or no access to new housing or to suburban areas. Most of these Americans, regardless of their educational, economic or professional accomplishments, have no alternative but to live in used dwellings originally occupied by white Americans who have a free choice of housing, new or old.

Housing thus seems to be the one commodity in the American market that is not freely available on equal terms to everyone who can afford to pay. It would be an affront to human dignity for any one group of Americans to be restricted to wearing only hand-me-down clothing or to eating the leftovers of others' food. Like food and clothing, housing is an essential of life, yet many non-white American families have no choice but secondhand homes. The result can be seen in high rates of disease, crime, juvenile delinquency, and social demoralization among those forced to live in such conditions. A nation dedicated to respect for the human dignity and of every individual should not permit such conditions to continue.

Second, the housing disabilities of colored Americans are part of a national housing crisis involving a general shortage of low-cost housing. Americans of lower income, both colored and white, have few opportunities for decent homes in good neighborhoods. Since most suburban housing is beyond their means, they remain crowded in the central city, creating new slums. Since colored people comprise a rising portion of the city dwellers with lowest income, these slums are becoming increasingly colored.

The population of metropolitan areas, already comprising over 60 per cent of the American people, is growing rapidly not merely by births but by migration. These migrants, many of them colored, most of them unadapted to urban life, form the cutting edge of the housing crisis.

The need is not for a pattern of integrated housing. It is for equal opportunity to secure decent housing.

RECOMMENDATION NO. 1

The commission recommends that an appropriate biracial committee or commission on housing be established in all cities and states with substantial non-white populations. Such agencies should be empowered to study racial problems in housing, receive and investigate complaints alleging discrimination, attempt to solve problems through mediation and conciliation, and consider whether these agencies should be strengthened by the enactment of legislation for equal opportunity in areas of housing deemed advisable.

RECOMMENDATION NOS. 2 AND 3

Therefore, the Commission recommends:

2. That the President issue an executive order stating the constitutional objective of equal opportunity in housing, directing all federal agencies to shape their policies and practices to make the maximum contribution to the achievement of this goal, and requesting the Commission on Civil Rights, if extended, to continue to study and appraise the policies of federal housing agencies, to prepare and propose plans to bring about the end of discrimination in all federally-assisted housing, and to make appropriate recommendations.

3. That the administrator of the Housing and Home Finance Agency give high priority to the problem of gearing the policies and the operations of his constituent housing agencies to the attainment of equal opportunity in housing.

RECOMMENDATION NO. 4

Therefore, the Commission recommends that, in support of state and city laws the Federal Housing Administration and the Veterans' Administration should strengthen their present agreements with states and cities have laws against discrimination in housing by requiring that builders subject to these laws who desire the benefits of federal mortgage insurance and loan guaranty programs agree in writing that they will abide by such laws.

FHA and VA should establish their own fact-finding machinery to determine whether such builders are violating state and city laws, and if it is found that they are, immediate steps should be taken to withdraw federal benefits from them, pending final action by the appropriate state agency or court.

RECOMMENDATION NO. 5

Therefore, the Commission recommends that the Public Housing Administration take affirmative action to encourage the selection of sites on open land in good areas outside the present centers of racial concentration. PHA should put the local housing authorities on notice that their proposals will be evaluated in this light. PHA should further encourage the construction of smaller projects that fit better into residential neighborhoods, rather than large developments of all "high rise" apartments that set a special group apart in a community of its own.

RECOMMENDATION NO. 6
Therefore, the Commission recommends that the Urban Renewal Administration take positive steps to assure that in preparation of overall community "workable programs" for urban renewal, spokesmen for minority groups are in fact included among the required citizens participation.

"THE FOUR governments conceive of this committee as a useful means of exploring, through mutual consultations, avenues of possible progress toward such agreements and recommendations on the limitation and reduction of all types of armaments and armed forces under effective international control as may, in the first instance, be of particular relevance to the countries participating in these deliberations.

"Furthermore, it is the hope of the four governments that the results achieved in these deliberations will provide a useful basis for the consideration of disarmament in the United Nations.

"It is the intention of the four governments that the United Nations disarmament commission will be kept appropriately informed of the deliberations of the committee.

"For this purpose the four governments have agreed that the committee will present reports on its work to the United Nations disarmament commission, and through it to the United Nations General Assembly and the Security Council."

By the Associated Press.

AT UNITED NATIONS headquarters in New York, Hammarskjöld proposed yesterday that the 82-nation U.N. Disarmament Commission meet Thursday to hear about the big four agreement.

Russia pulled out of a five-nation United Nations disarmament subcommittee in 1957 after lengthy talks in London. That group included the United States, Britain, France and Canada plus the Soviet Union. Later a 23-nation commission was created, but Moscow boycotted this too on ground that 16 of the 23 members "belonged to military blocs directed by Western powers."

United States officials said yesterday the five-five split on the new committee was agreed to because of special circumstances and in view of the great importance attached to the need for disarmament.

Khrushchev

at the outset of the civil war which followed the Bolshevik seizure of the revolution. He joined a proletarian regiment in the Donets basin. Later he headed the agricultural section of the Kursk city soviet near his birthplace.

BACK IN MILITARY service, he commanded a battalion fighting White Russian forces. It was wiped out, but he escaped blame and became a political commissar for a guerrilla detachment. After the civil war he worked as an iron miner.

Khrushchev got his first chance for formal schooling at 27, when he was sent to a "rabfak"—workers' faculty—school in Kharkov in the Ukraine. After a series of minor party jobs, he attracted the attention of Lazar Moiseyevich Kaganovich, then the dreaded iron commissar of the Ukraine. He was sent to Moscow's Industrial Academy.

Under such important patronage, Khrushchev prospered. He was shrewd enough to pick the winning side in the Stalin-Trotsky fight, and by 1931 was secretary of a Moscow party regional committee and member of the All-Union Central Committee. He toured industrial areas to root out Stalin's enemies, then helped Kaganovich marshal labor for building the Moscow subway. For all this he won his first Order of Lenin, highest award in the U.S.S.R. Today he has four others, plus a glittering display of lesser medals.

KHRUSHCHEV applied his bull-like vigor to bossing the Ukraine and serving Stalin during the frightful political blood purges of the mid-1930s. He vaulted into full membership in the powerful palace guard, the Politburo, by 1933. From World War II he emerged a political lieutenant general, concerned at least as much with party control in the army as with winning the war.

Khrushchev turned his attention to agriculture. He tried to transform collective farms into agro-gorods (farm cities) and the peasants in to farm laborers without private plots of their own. He was too enthusiastic. Stalin slapped him down. He bounced back, and by the eve of Stalin's death in early 1953, Khrushchev was a highly influential politician.

But until his sixtieth year, Nikita Khrushchev was unknown to the outside world, a faceless, quiet man. He has made up for all that in the last five years.

Forum for Far East Crisis

Focal point for the world's diplomatic strains and stresses, Security Council chamber reflects misleading air of serenity as delegates and their aids gather for extraordinary session at United Nations yesterday. Council members were summoned into emergency session to consider the situation in Laos, where the government is menaced by pro-Communist rebels. Eight hours of debate and an attempted use of Russia's veto power preceded the vote, early today, to set up a four-nation fact-finding commission.

'Why Did We Ever Bring Our Parents?'

PARIS, Sept. 8.

MOST YOUNG PEOPLE we have met who are traveling with their parents find it very difficult, and there are moments, they have confessed to us, when they wonder why they ever brought their parents in the first place.

Parents never seem to know what is going on. They have preconceived notions of the way children should behave in Europe. And they have no appreciation of what a child has to do to keep his parents from going out of their minds.

In the past week we have talked to many young people about traveling with their parents, and their comments have been very interesting.

Missy Montgomery, the 11-year-old daughter of Dinah Shore and George Montgomery, told us: "The thing that gets me the maddest about traveling with my parents is that my father won't let me have any wine."

"Why? Do you like wine?" we asked her.

"No, but I like to have it in front of me. Everyone in Europe has a glass of wine in front of him. You don't have to drink it."

Missy Montgomery is traveling with her parents and Mrs. Sidney Korshak, and the latter's two young sons, Harry, 14, and Stuart, 12.

Harry said the thing that gets him mad is, no matter what he orders in a restaurant, everyone sticks his fork into it first.

Stuart said: "What gets me mad is the sightseeing. Dinah and my mother plan our sightseeing every morning, and then when it's time to go they say they've got other things to do and we're stuck."

Missy said: "Of course we've got Daddy, but the only reason he comes along is because he doesn't want to go shopping with Mommy."

"I don't mind sightseeing," Harry said, "if it's just a matter of seeing something. But we're always told we have to see it, and you don't want to see something you're told you have to see."

"There is always a constant fight for money," Missy said. "In Paris we used to eat cantaloupe for breakfast until Mommy found out they were $2 apiece."

"My mother," Stuart said, "is always threatening me with cutting off my allowance because of something I want to do."

DINAH SHORE and daughter MISSY.

If you're going to write this for other kids, tell them to get their allowance in advance so it isn't a threat all the time.

"We've only been to three movies since we've been in Europe," Harry said.

"If Daddy wasn't so fed up," Missy said, "we probably wouldn't have seen those."

We asked them what the best way of traveling with parents was.

"The best thing, if you can work it," said Stuart, "is to get your own room. Then they don't know what you're doing. You can stay up all night and they won't know it. We did that on the ship. If you think they're being too unfair you can always go on a hunger strike."

"We did that in Paris," said Harry. "We had come home from a full day of sightseeing and we were in our pajamas and we were going to eat in the suite when my mother discovered that it said on the menu there was an extra 20 per cent charge for meals served in the rooms. So she insisted we kids get dressed and go down to the dining room to eat. So we went on a hunger strike and in a half hour she gave in."

Missy said: "A hunger strike is a good weapon but shouldn't be used too often."

As far as European food was concerned, the three recommended that the best way to eat in Europe was not ask what anything was until after you ate it.

Stuart said: "We had octopus one night and didn't know it. It tasted a little like rubber bands. But I think you should try everything once."

Night life is always a problem they told us.

Missy said: "I have a girl friend, and she's only a year older than I am and she got to see the Lido show. But Daddy wouldn't let me go. He said we should be in bed."

We asked them if they had to do it all over again would they still bring their parents with them.

"I guess so," said Missy. "How else would we get here?"

Small-Fry Permanents

"DEAR DR. MOLNER: I have a little girl 2 years old, and her hair is very straight. It won't hold a curl for more than one day. Can I give her a very gentle home permanent, or is she too young?—MRS. E. S."

Personally, I think the small fry are very attractive with pig tails, pony tails, and so on. But I'm often out-voted.

This discussion of little girls' hair comes up repeatedly—and the mothers, not the children, are the ones who are concerned about it.

Fussing with the hair has become something of an obsession with American women, and their vanity is projected toward the youngsters—who don't give a hoot whether their hair is straight, curly, blond, brown, black or red.

My own feeling is that fancy fixings for hair should be allowed to wait until a girl is old enough to know what she wants, and take care of it herself. For the small fry, bangs, pig tails, pony tails (but not drawn too tight, as tight ones have caused some loss of hair), ribbons, barrettes, braids—pick whatever is attractive, and be happy with it.

As to chemical treatments, like permanents—well, there is some risk, occasionally, with the best of them. I have a long letter from a mother who used a home permanent on her youngster, and the hair started coming out. She took the child to a beauty shop—and the same thing happened. Apparently there was something about that particular child's hair which would not tolerate the chemicals used in permanents. Fortunately, when they let her hair alone, it grew back normally.

I am not against home permanents, or any permanents, but it seems to me that the ages of 2 or 10 or 15 years are too young for these artificial aids to beauty since, for one thing, the little charmers are so lovely with hair of any hue or bent. And, for another, there is some risk with chemical coiffures albeit slight. In addition, you might get some of the stuff in the youngster's eyes. Why, as I recollect it, it was hard enough to give a 2-year-old a bath without occasionally getting soap in the little eyes.

Dr. Molner welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Youth Parade--Make-up Formula for Teen-Agers

By Reba and Bonnie Churchill

1. "HOW much make-up should a teen-ager wear?" Claude Thompson, NBC-TV make-up director, has worked out this routine for normal skin, giving maximum benefits with minimum make-up. The most flattering beauty base is a clean, glowing face, so after thorough cleansing, he suggests warding off irritations and closing pores with an application of witch hazel as demonstrated by Janine Perreau.

2. MAKE "DOWN," not up, is his motto for teen-agers such as 16-year-old actress Janine Perreau. Instead of patchwork eyebrows caused from inexperienced plucking or a harsh crayon line, try brushing brows and lashes with colorless pomade or petroleum jelly. Once applied, brush hairs into smooth, natural arch.

3. THOMPSON has a simple suggestion on how to avoid a ragged lipstick line. He advises using a red cosmetic pencil to get a clean lip line first. Then, fill in the rest of the color with the lipstick tube.

Cloak and Dagger Fashion Piracy

By Gay Pauley

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (UPI). FRENCH DESIGNERS go to the police when their styles are stolen. American designers just grin and bear it.

But on both sides of the Atlantic, fashion piracy takes on all the overtones of a cloak and dagger operation. Designers go to great pains to keep their ideas top secret until the new collections are in production. And the style thieves just as efficiently operate espionage rings specializing in the length of a hemline or the curve of a bosom. The root of the whole evil is money. For what woman will pay $300 to $500 for a top designer label, when within days or weeks copies as low as $39.95 may be available. The difference will be in quality of fabric and workmanship.

There is a lot of legal copying of Paris styles. Manufacturers or buyers for department stores and specialty shops are permitted to purchase a particular model or models and mass-produce it. But at least the designer gets his money's worth.

It's the illegal copying which harasses the style leaders. The French have government protection. The police recently arrested Mrs. Helene Kastner Swab, a Viennese newspaper woman, and charged her with sketching models from the recent Paris collections and selling them to outlets in New York.

Daniel Gorin of the Paris Fashion Syndicate, a designer group, said the skullduggery had been going on for 12 years. "The latest Paris models were on sale in American stores before they were available to our clients," he complained.

American designers can take no legal action, although in recent sessions of Congress bills to permit copyright have been offered. None has passed.

"We have to just grin and bear it," said Norman Norell, veteran designer and winner of just about every fashion award around.

But most American designers have their own methods of preventing thievery, at least until a dress, coat or suit has gotten to the store.

Some screen all workroom personnel. Some keep all sketches padlocked and available only to the designer and his trusted associates. The couturier Mainbocher keeps muslin bags with drawing tops to drape over his live models when they're walking around the workroom.

And many designers show a new collection to buyers only by appointment; which means they know at all times who is in the showroom. Fashion reporters are screened just as carefully, although American designers—unlike the Parisian—permit us to sketch. Many of us do for one reason: it is a fast way of taking notes on a new silhouette. In covering Paris collections, reporters promise not to sketch; in a jam-packed showroom it's easy as pie, and you're just on scout's honor.

Several American designers, commenting on the recent incident in Paris, said most of the thievery here comes at the retail level. The manufacturers who thrive on "knock-offs" (the industry term for copies) purchase a Norell, a Pauline Trigere, or a Luis Esteve dress, by sending the wife or secretary to the store to use her charge account.

Some of the copyists keep the dress after reproducing it en masse. But others, said Pauline Trigere, "even have the gall to take the garment back for a credit."

Miss Trigere's styles are perennial favorites with the copyists. She laughingly recalled that one costume from a recent collection originally was priced at $169.95 retail. It was copied two weeks later for $110; another manufacturer copied the copy for $79.95; and still another, copied a copy of the copy and sold it for $39.95. Her brother and business partner Robert, got increasingly upset as the copies got cheaper and located the manufacturer who made the $39.95 number. Robert paid him a call and thoroughly bawled him out.

The startled manufacturer got the last word: "Who's Pauline Trigere?" he asked. "I never heard o' her."

His interest seems to be focused on Enid Robinson, the attractive camera girl at the night club . . . Columnist Jim Bishop is a grandfather for the third time, courtesy of his daughter Virginia (Mrs. Charles Frechette), who is lullabying a baby boy at Holy Name Hospital in Teaneck, N.J. Tom Chamales is reported to have received $150,000 from M-G-M for the screen rights to his new novel, "Go Naked in the World" . . . Terry Carter will play Stanley Kowalski in a Negro version of "A Streetcar Named Desire" if Tennessee Williams approves the venture.

The controversial Brigitte Bardot movie, "Babette," which was presented at the Moscow Film Festival, is due for more headlines. Nikita Khrushchev has wired producer Raul Levy requesting a print of the flicker so he can view it while vacationing in the Black sea area.

Tani Seitz, the versatile young Broadway actress, has snagged a choice role for the coming season. She was chosen over several bigger names, to play Varina Howell Davis, wife of Jefferson Davis, in Vina Delmar's Civil War drama, "The Confederates."

In the TV version of "Body and Soul," which will star Ben Gazzara in the role John Garfield created on film, the leading character will be changed, from a Jewish boy to a Puerto Rican youth to make the script more topical—the thinking being that Jewish boys in 1939 don't have to fight their way out of poverty and obscurity by way of the prize ring, but Puerto Ricans do.

Obviously, Jimmy Boyd can no longer qualify as a "child singing star." He's romancing the current Miss Iceland. Friends of Ariane Dahl and Fernando Lamas are puzzled by their "reconciliation" format. They're seen together in public, but appear to be maintaining separate residences. (Copyright, 1959.)

They'll Do It Every Time

Fix It Yourself

By Hubbard Cobb

IT'S PRETTY HARD to live in a house for any length of time without having, sooner or later, to fasten something to masonry—poured concrete, masonry block or brick. There are several ways to tackle this job. If what you want to fasten to the masonry can be fastened with a screw, your best bet is a masonry anchor which consists of a metal sleeve and a screw that fits into the sleeve. A hole is drilled into the masonry with about the same diameter as the metal sleeve. The sleeve is inserted into the hole and you tighten the screw. As the screw goes into the sleeve it expands the sleeve so that the sleeve will take a firm grip on the masonry around it. To hang an article to a wall, the screw is inserted through the holes provided in the article before it goes into the sleeve.

Holes for the sleeve can be made with a star drill and hammer or with a quarter-inch electric drill fitted with a masonry bit. Where block or brick are involved, it's easier to drill through the mortar joint than the block or brick. Objects can also be fastened to block and brick through the mortar joint with hard steel nails such as cut flooring nails or special masonry nails.

Another good way to fasten objects to masonry is with a special ram set that allows special metal fasteners to be driven into the masonry. Some of these can be operated with a heavy hammer while others used by professionals get their force from a blank cartridge. If you have a lot of things to fasten to a masonry wall, such as furring strips for a wall surface, it would pay to purchase or rent one of the hand-operated devices or pay a professional to come in with a cartridge-operated job.

Bringing Up Baby.

HINTS COLLECTED BY MRS. DAN GERBER, MOTHER OF 8
Sometimes new mothers are apt to take the job of motherhood seriously, they forget to remember, the assorted hugs, coos, kisses and smiles you give your baby when you bathe, dress or feed him give him a sense of being wanted . . . give you an inner glow, too. Mother love may not show up in inches and ounces but it certainly makes a baby's spirit blossom.

On the "grow." During the first year, your baby's biggest job is growing. Since his growth rate is so fast, his protein needs are greater than those of an adult. Gerber provides 8 protein-rich Strained Meats to help, promote that growth. Made from selected, lean, Armour cuts, they're prepared by a time-and-temperature-controlled cooking method. This special method not only "seals in" savory meat flavors, but makes it possible to preserve the utmost in precious nutritive values.

"Cap-i-to!" Idea. Those special baby bath towels, with one corner stitched into a hood-like cap, are not only practical but adorable. The hood protects baby's head from drafts while you're putting him dry . . . and also makes your cherub look especially cherishable. P. S. Worth taking a pix of baby in this outfit.

"Sunny side up." Gerber Strained Egg Yolks are sunny in color, smooth and custard-like in texture with a delicate, fresh-egg flavor that's hard to duplicate. Nutritional benefits include iron and vitamin A—plenty, plus a good amount of protein. Important: Gerber Strained Egg Yolks are heat-stabilized for baby's protection.

Seal of approval. All Gerber Baby Foods have earned the Good Housekeeping Seal and Parents' Seal of Approval. This means that these fine foods have been tested for quality and accepted for advertising by these reputable magazines. Gerber Baby Foods, Fremont, Mich.

Ready to Charge
On Club Safari

PARIS, Sept. 8.
NOTHING IS MORE CHIC these days than to go down to darkest Africa and shoot an elephant or a lion. Or maybe your White Hunter.

"Actor William Holden and Oilman Ray Ryan have asked me to honor you with a charter membership in their Mount Kenya Safari Club of Nanyuki, Kenya, British East Africa."

That is the kind of mail I get. You cannot beat that kind of mail for making you feel prosperous on a sunny Paris morning.

The letter is written on a sort of ragged, elegant papyrus. It is embossed with two gold elephants and a mountain and the name of the club.

It is signed by Joe Glaston who, I think, is a press agent for Ray Ryan.

Mr. Ryan has a jillion dollars from oil. He loves gambling and the out-of-doors. When Mr. Ryan is in Reno, he rides over to Lake Tahoe with Bernie Einstoss, the gambler.

On the seat between them, each person puts a little stack of $100 bills.

If a deer jumps up on Mr. Ryan's side, he takes one of Mr. Einstoss' bills. If it jumps up on Bernie's side, HE gets one of the Ryan skins.

About the club. Mr. Holden is president. Mr. Ryan is vice president.

"Your fellow charter members," says Mr. Glaston's letter, "include Sir Winston Churchill, Clark Gable, Walt Disney, John Wayne, William Randolph Hearst Jr., Lily Pons, Senator Lyndon Johnson, Senator Everett M. Dirksen, Representative John McCormack, United States Treasurer Ivy Baker Priest, Conrad Hilton, Donald Campbell and R. Admiral John Ford U.S.N.R."

As you can see, this is not just like belonging to the Book-of-the-Month Club. I don't know what my membership will require. But I am willing to go all the way.

I suppose I will have to shoot SOMETHING. All African big game people shoot things. Usually lions. The lions deserve shooting, however. Because they were picking on the natives.

Or else we shoot rogue elephants. A rogue elephant is an elephant who carries a switchblade and has done a little time for car clouting. Anyway, the natives are grateful as all get out and hold a gorgeous native ceremony.

Fortunately I ran into a very good letter in the Daily Telegraph in London. In the letters to the editor column.

Mr. Peter Simple complains that a fellow traveler tossed a box lunch out of his car in Africa. The box lunch was prepared by the British Transport Commission—the same lunch served by the caterers on British railway trains.

"This box lunch was devoured by a passing rhino," wrote Mr. Simple, "and I regret to state the rhino immediately died."

Mr. Simple thinks it is all right for the British Transport Commission to serve these lunches to hardy travelers. But instructions should be printed on the box NOT to feed the contents to African wild life.

This gives me quite an idea how I can qualify for the Mount Kenya club without using firearms.

I think one of those wayside lunches you get, say around on Highway 30 in Iowa, would fetch a rhino. I would bet it would down an elephant. It nearly got me. And I have an iron digestion. I think it was that orange-bottled salad dressing. Or maybe that add-water-and-serve gravy.

Anyway, it is an honor to be among such honorable charter members. And I want to assure them I will bring only the BEST box lunch. The most lethal box lunch.

"Hand me a professional football game hot dog, gun bearer. I think he's about to charge."

Ann Landers
A Husband's View

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Don't faint. This letter is being written by a man. I was touched by the sad letter from the girl who wanted to develop her measurements and was miserable because nature had cheated her. She signed her letter "Flat Florence."

I was married to the other kind for three years. She lived in front of the mirror with a tape measure in her hand. She was a lousy cook (when she cooked) and the world's worst housekeeper. If a button came off my coat she'd pin it on. I never saw a needle or thread in our house.

Her own clothes were beautiful and that's all she cared about. She wasn't happy unless every man in the room was falling all over her.

My second wife is a wonderful person but she has a terrific complex because she's a Flat Florence, too. She keeps comparing herself with my first wife. No matter how I try, I can't get it through her head that it doesn't matter. I wish you'd print this letter, Ann. I think it would make her feel better.—SYD

* Dear Syd: Here's the letter—and I hope it makes your wife feel better. It should give a lift to all Flat Florences to know there are men around who aren't dimension-wacky.

DEAR ANN: My husband and I both work five days a week. When I get home I have to wash the breakfast dishes, clean the house, prepare dinner, wash, iron, pay bills and do the endless chores a housewife falls heir to.

My husband plops himself in front of the TV, reads the paper and takes a nap in the chair until I wake him up and announce that dinner is on the table. After dinner he goes back to the same chair until bedtime.

If I suggest that he fill my coffee cup or carry out the garbage he gives me a scathing look and says, "I worked hard all day."

Am I wrong to expect a little help around the house? If I am, please tell me and I'll keep my mouth closed. If I'm right, I'd like a little support from you IN WRITING.

—POOPED YVONNE.

Dear Yvonne: A woman who helps bring home the bacon has a right to expect her husband to help her fry it. Since you're holding down two jobs your hubby should get out of his easy chair and pitch in on the home front. If he refuses, tell him you're quitting your salaried job before you cave in.

DEAR ANN: "I'm having a peculiar problem with my 12-year-old and I need your help. I hardly recognize Bernice when she walks in the door. She always has someone else's clothes on. There are six girls in her 'inside circle' as she calls it, and they are forever switching clothes."

I don't know why she goes to such pains to buy just the right dresses, skirts, sweaters and blouses. After two weeks I never see them. Are all girls this way, or is this bunch daffy? What should I do about it?

—JUST ANOTHER MOTHER.

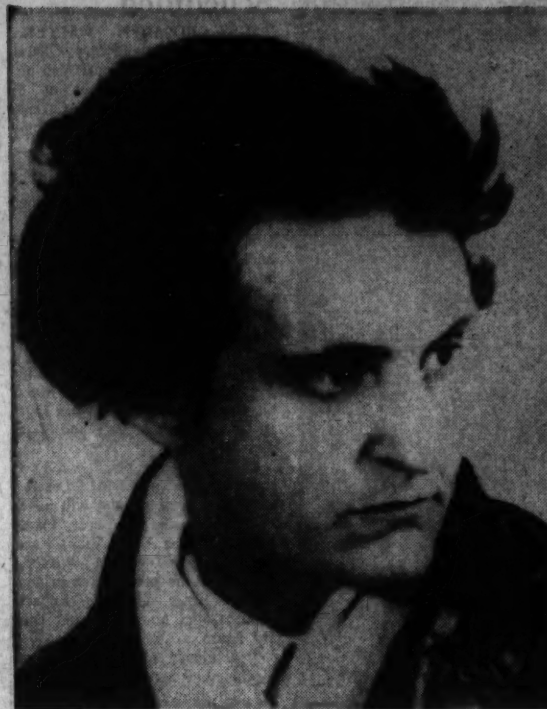

Dear Just Another: This adolescent "stinkness" is common among 12-year-olds. Be patient and I promise she'll outgrow it as she did the previous phases.

To learn the body-traps of teen-age drinking, write for Ann Landers' booklet, "Teen-age Drinking," including with your request 20 cents in coin and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

(Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of the Post-Dispatch including a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Golden Era of American Expatriates in Paris

SYLVIA BEACH, who founded Shakespeare and Company, her famous bookstore and lending library in Paris. Opened in 1919 the bookstore was closed in 1942.

GEORGE ANTHEIL, who had an apartment above the library, seldom used a key. Here MISS BEACH watches the American composer climb into his room via window.

GERTRUDE STEIN, who called the expatriates "a lost generation," is shown here watching American sculptor JO DAVIDSSON working on a statue of her.

Exhibit by Sylvia Beach Offered Glimpse of Delightful Days of '20s When Young U.S. Writers Swarmed to French Capital

By Arthur Higbee

George Gershwin came and set the cacophony of the French capital's traffic to music with "An American in Paris."

George Antheil, music's "Bad Boy" who died this year, had an apartment over Miss Beach's bookstore.

He seldom used his key. A rare photograph in the exhibit showed him clambering up the facade and climbing in through the window.

Man Ray made portrait photography a new art form. He recorded his contemporaries—Hemingway, Fitzgerald, Antheil, Eliot—in photographs that were the highlight of the recent exhibit.

Over them presided Gertrude Stein, who encouraged Hemingway to keep writing and told him and all his fellow expatriates, "You are a lost generation."

By this she meant simply that most of them had been too young for World War I (although Hemingway was an ambulance driver at 18). But they were quick to find themselves.

One of the expatriates, composer-critic Virgil Thomson, who still lives in an apartment on the Quai Voltaire, says, "We were a hard-working bunch. We liked having a good time and we had one. But we probably drank less than the average American tourist does today."

Their meeting place was Miss Beach's bookstore and lending library, Shakespeare and Company, which she had founded in 1919. It stayed in business right into the German occupation but finally closed in 1942, never to reopen.

Today the site, just down the Rue de L'Odéon from the Comédie Française on the Left Bank, is occupied by a clinical supply outfit. However, Miss Beach still has an apartment upstairs.

Miss Beach was brought up in Kingston, N.J., but has lived most of her life here. Her only living relative in the States is her sister Holly, now Mrs. Frederick J. Dennis of Greenwich, Conn.

Shakespeare and Company quickly became a sort of informal club for aspiring authors, especially American authors.

The first American subscriber to the lending library was Gertrude Stein; the first French subscriber was Andre Gide. Other members were Fitzgerald, Sherwood Anderson, Hemingway, Pound, Eliot.

Miss Beach, with Pound's aid, published "Ulysses" in 1922. It first came out in a limited edition of 1000. Buyers included D. H. Lawrence, Hemingway, W. B. Yeats and Andre Gide.

George Bernard Shaw wrote to say that he already knew enough of the Dublin streets which Joyce described. He added that paying 150 francs (then about $7.50) revolted his Irish spirit.

Miss Beach says, "I still don't see why people insist on calling it the lost generation. Today, as 30 years ago, it seems to me that few generations have had

Debut Parties Mark Early September

By Fay Proffitt

MISS LANA RAE MUELLER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Charles Mueller, will make her debut late this afternoon at a tea at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Philip Vierheller, 6332 Wydown boulevard, Clayton.

Because the St. Louis Zoo, of which her grandfather is director, has been Miss Mueller's playground since early childhood, a clever theme featuring imitations of some of her favorite animals will be emphasized at her coming-out party.

Mrs. Vierheller, the guest of honor and Mrs. Mueller will greet guests before the living room fireplace, at either side of which are standards holding spreading bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums. At one side of the flower arrangement a stuffed giraffe, with a bronze ribbon and bow around his neck, towers over the scene.

The tea table in the dining room is adorned with Fire Island orange and red Fuji chrysanthemums in a crystal and silver epergne. Candelabra to match the epergne holds ivory tapers. The buffet is decorated with jungle foliage and more of the brilliant chrysanthemums. Here, carved ivory lamps and mounted birds of paradise, with their cream-colored plumage, from Mr. Vierheller's collections, are displayed.

Punch will be served from a large table, shaded by a pale green umbrella, in the garden where stuffed monkeys and penguins are placed among the plants and flowers.

Miss Mueller will wear a white chantilly lace gown over satin, styled with a low round neck and capelet sleeves. The terrace-length skirt falls from a dull gold satin cummerbund. She will hold a bouquet of jungle foliage fashioned into flowers. Mrs. Vierheller has chosen an almond green silk self-embossed gown and Mrs. Mueller will wear a brown draped chiffon costume. Both will have pompon corsages in autumn shades.

Miss Mueller has asked the following friends to serve at the tea table: Miss Elizabeth Brokaw, Miss Helen Campbell, Miss Lila Childress, Miss Mary Lynn Crossen, Miss Betty Feuerbacher, Miss Gail Gardner, Miss Elizabeth Hall, Miss Judith Hickey, Miss Florence Johnson, Miss Mary Mitchell, Miss Georgia Mudd, Miss Laura Orthwein, Miss Susan Russe, Miss Nancy Schumacher, Miss Joyce Thompson, Miss Mary Waldheim and Miss Kay Wilson. Each girl will be presented a wristlet decorated with a full-blown rose and a tiny silver animal charm.

Assisting the hostess and Mrs. Mueller will be Mrs. Sam Bredon, Mrs. August A. Busch Jr., Mrs. Jack Flynn, Mrs. C. Robert Pommer and Mrs. Philip George Vierheller, a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Vierheller.

Miss Burkham Presented at Sports Party.

AN UNUSUAL COMING-OUT PARTY, that of Miss Sarah Gilpin Burkham, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Burkham, took place today at the Bath and Tennis Club. Guests, debutantes and their beaux, were invited for luncheon and asked to wear shorts and to bring their bathing suits.

A buffet luncheon was served. Tables were set up around the pool. The guests swam, played tennis and deck tennis and took part in weight-lifting contests. In the afternoon a group of skin divers gave an exhibition and party guests, wishing to try their skill, were furnished with the essential equipment for skin diving.

Miss Burkham, a graduate of John Burroughs School, last year attended Antioch College, Yellow Springs, O. This year she plans to study at University College, Washington University. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. J. D. Perry Francis of Santa Barbara, Calif., and Mrs. Stanley Bright of Philadelphia.

Introduced at Garden Dance.

MISS MARY BLAIR O'LEARY, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. James Lee O'Leary, and Miss Beatty Field Biggs were introduced to their contemporaries last night at a garden dinner dance at the home of Miss Biggs' parents, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Biggs, 445 North Taylor avenue, Kirkwood.

The debutantes and their parents received in the living room before the fireplace which was screened with magnolia foliage and yellow and white flowers. A long buffet table placed at the entrance of the rose garden was decorated with a silver antique container filled with yellow and white blossoms. Lotus lights were in the center of small tables beneath a marquee and were hung from nearby magnolia trees.

Miss O'Leary wore an ice blue silk organza dress designed with an oval neck, short sleeves and a waltz-length skirt tied with a blue satin sash. She held a bouquet of gardenias. Miss Biggs was in a pale yellow organza dress trimmed with a spring green velvet belt. Her bouquet was green orchids.

Miss O'Leary, an alumna of John Burroughs School, will begin her second year at Sweetbriar (Va.) College this fall. Her parents live at 415 North Hanley road, University City. Miss Biggs, also a graduate of John Burroughs, will be a sophomore at Colorado College this fall.

Fellows-Danis Engagement.

DR. AND MRS. PETER G. DANIS, 7017 Kingsbury avenue, University City, last night announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary Katherine Danis, to Boyd W. Fellows. News of the engagement and forthcoming Nov. 28 wedding was told at a buffet supper at the Danis home, given ostensibly as a farewell for another daughter, Mrs. Edward P. Gormley, and Mr. Gormley, who are moving to Cincinnati. Guests were members of the two families and a few friends of the engaged pair.

Miss Danis was graduated from Villa Duchesne and St. Louis University School of Nursing, later doing graduate work at Denver Children's Hospital. She is now an instructor in nursing at Cardinal Glennon Memorial Hospital.

A member of a large family, the bride-elect is the sister of Peter G. Danis Jr., Lt. Richard K. Danis, Mystic, Conn., a Navy doctor; James Danis, Mrs. Gormley, Miss Laura Lee, David, Tom and Tim, twins, and Deborah Danis. Their grandparents were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kramer and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Danis, Ottawa, Ont.

Mr. Fellows, who lives at 5340 Delmar boulevard, was reared by his grandmother, Mrs. Frank Boyd Fellows, 6828 Scanlan avenue. He has one sister, Mrs. Philip Marbut Moomaw of Calton Springs Farm, Verona, Mo.

The prospective bridegroom was graduated from St. Louis University and received his master's degree from the University of Michigan.

OPINION

Marriage in Jeopardy

Dear Martha:

I AM 22 and have two children. I have been married four years, two of which my husband spent in service. We were doing fine until his people came to our house. Then he began to work in the evening and come home late. We separated, then decided to try it again and did fine for awhile. We got a car and the trouble began. People said he was going with another woman so we separated again. He drinks hard and never keeps his promises to me. His mother always tells him he is right in everything he does. I love him and want to make a home but can't see any way. He just doesn't seem to care. Everyone thinks I should leave him for good. Should I? Sometimes he doesn't see me for three or four days and when he does he just sits and doesn't say anything. Because the children are so small, I can't work. Should I leave him alone or pray he changes and becomes a good husband? He once was. Is it possible again?

READER:

Certainly, it's possible, but not if Mama keeps interfering and you and he keep separating instead of trying to work out your problems. Don't leave him for good because "everyone" thinks you should. The more you talk about it to your acquaintances, the harder it will be to work it out. Both of you need professional help. You also need to get away to yourselves. If people only worked as hard at staying married as they do at getting married, there would be little reason for the divorce courts.

Dear Martha:

I HAVE A FIANCEE who is so jealous he won't even let me answer the telephone at home without standing right there by me and trying to listen. My number is almost the same as a tavern number in the next block and I guess I get as many as five calls a week from people who are trying to call the tavern. If this happens while this fellow and I are at home, he gets furious. Last night, it was a wrong number and before I could explain to the man who was calling, he grabbed the phone out of my hand and slammed it down. When I complain, he says it's because he loves me and no other man is going to get to talk to me. What do you think?

WORRIED:

Why doesn't he just handcuff and gag you? He isn't in love, he's just sick. Jealousy up to a point is normal, but this boy has got it bad. Marry him, and you'll end up a cringing, miserable slave, scared of your shadow, for fear he'll think someone is following you.

IN ANSWER TO Dorothy Anne: As an attendant, you would pay for your own dress and accessories (even though the style and color is determined by the bride), and you would be expected to entertain for her. Because you are a good friend, you will want to give her as nice a present as you can afford, but if it will strain the budget to be a member of the wedding party, by all means tell her frankly why you cannot accept. It's a nice honor, but she wouldn't want to embarrass you.

By John Keasler

DEAR GEORGE: All of my life, I've heard that exercise was the best method of getting rid of excess fat. If this is true, tell me why do so many women have double chins?

ALWAYS A LISTENER.

DEAR LISTENER: The weight lost by talking so much is put back on by chewing the fat.

DEAR GEORGE: I am a teen-ager in love with a man who is 47. I know it's love because on the day we met my horoscope was favorable for romance. He's married and has four children but that doesn't matter because my horoscope said not to bother with details. Do you think he is too old for me? I am very serious. What shall we do?—GEMINI.

Dear Gemini: Saturn is coming into the ascendancy but the influence of the Venus field is darkening on the inner edge showing a disturbing tendency today for Gemini to get whaled by their fathers with a hair brush. Change astrologers, and go back to Ricky Nelson.

DEAR GEORGE: Some of my girl friends are driving me crazy. They paint their fingernails and toenails a real bright red. Then they come over to my house and scrape every bit of the polish off. As a result, I spend the rest of the day picking little red specks of nail polish off the couch, chairs and rug. This is getting so bad I'm beginning to see red spots everywhere I look. What can I do?—GERTY.

Dear Gerty: It is the chance to help people with problems like yours that makes it all worth while for me. However, I can only deduce that perhaps this little group is trying to tell you something. Perhaps they want you to "join the gang." On the other hand, you may have fallen in with a nest of idiots. Does your city have a Youth Guidance Center? They could go over there and pick at their toes. Suggest that they pack box lunches and make a day of it. Of course, it may be your city has no Youth Guidance Center. In any case, I personally think you're all in big trouble.

If problems are causing you to lose sleep, learn the value of Sideways Thinking—mail your problems to George, in care of the Post-Dispatch, and concentrate on the more basic things of life. Like counting sheep.

Bennett Cerf Try and Stop Me

HARRY KURNITZ, playwright and wit, began his career as a violinist, and still starts fiddling at the slightest provocation. "I love to play gypsy music in night clubs," he admits. "When I've had a few drinks, some ancient urge rises in me. Too few drinks, I'm inhibited. Too many, my fingers refuse to function. But there's a period of about 40 seconds between the two stages when I'm pretty good."

One of Kurnitz's favorite violins was purchased from the fiddler who used to play sad songs to inspire Gloria Swanson when she was emoting before the camera in Hollywood's good old silent days. "I pick up this instrument," muses Kurnitz, "and before I know it, I'm playing 'Hearts and Flowers'!"

AN EXPLORER, visiting a prosperous tribe in Africa, noticed that the chief's bride wore a beautiful diamond in each nostril. "Why do you wear diamonds in your nose?" he inquired. "Because," answered the lady with admirable directness, "I find them more becoming than emeralds or rubies."

MANDALAY, Sept. 8.—There are three things that impress the tourist in Burma: The scenery, the pagodas and the women. Any foreigner who imagines that the women of Burma are down-trodden drudges is in for a pleasant jolt. Women here enjoy both independence and equality with men—this is unusual in Asia—and, throughout Burma's history, their rights have been traditional.

In three extremely crucial matters—marriage, divorce and inheritance—women have all the rights of men. "Arranged marriages," which continue in many parts of Asia, are dying out here. When a girl's parents do pick her husband, she has a right to refuse. If her marriage is a genuine disaster, a divorce by mutual consent is arranged. If a divorce takes place, all the possessions acquired during the years of marriage are divided evenly between the couple.

Despite their gentle voices and femininity, the women of Burma thrive in the business world. The tourist first begins to sense this in the bazaars and markets, which are as much a fixture in Burma as the green rice paddies. Often smoking a cigar, a woman sits crosslegged in a stall, handling her business with the briskness of a Wall Street broker. She wears a long tube skirt with a jacket.

The stall is hers. She sets the prices, makes the sales pitch and counts the cash with authority. Be it pineapples, bolts of cloth, flowers, religious offerings or jewelry, a Burmese woman knows how to make a profit. She also appears in other situations, such as sitting behind a teakwood desk, signing a business contract, acting as the midwoman between a farmer and a retailer, as the agent for an import-export company or as a shareholder in a hotel. She always has the right to transact business.

One curious measure of the Burmese woman's independence is the custom that allows her to retain her maiden name. If she wishes, after she is married. She also can vote or run for office, choose any career in traditionally masculine professions or work side-by-side with her husband in the rice paddies without forsaking her womanliness.

There is no battle of the sexes in Burma. Despite their freedom, these Asian women are wise enough to draw their own boundaries. A woman often may be seen walking behind her husband on the street, carrying the bundles. At the most sophisticated party, women never mingle with the men; they congregate in one corner.

The women of Burma do not want to change too much. As with Emma Sein Win, a 36-year-old Burmese who has two children and works as a librarian for the United States Information Service in Mandalay, old customs are often the most comforting. Emma will never cut her waist-length hair or wear a western dress instead of her ankle-length skirt. Yet, she uses lipstick. She is fond of playing tennis, but to appear on the courts in a pair of shorts would "cause a scandal." So, she simply hikes up her skirt a few inches.

Emma and her husband are building a large, expensive house in Mandalay, and she consulted an astrologer about an auspicious date to begin construction. The new house will have two kitchens. One is styled on the conventional Burmese plan, with a charcoal stove. The second kitchen is a small electric one in the American manner.

If the American mania for Asian influence in fashion and home furnishings keeps up, Burma is a new and untapped source. The long skirt, which is similar for both Burmese men and women except that it is fastened differently at the waist, might make the most comfortable and economical at-home skirt. It can be slipped on over the head or stepped into; it can be folded over one hip and tucked in or tied at the waist. Burma's men still wear the long skirt, although trousers also are popular.

Burma is a country of villages and a woman living in one is unlikely to have much luxury or leisure. But there is one cosmetic that she can use in much the same comforting way that Americans apply face creams. It is a yellow paste that is made from the bark of the thanakha tree after being ground down on a stone and mixed with a little water. It cools the face and, as one American tourist explained, "It straightens out the wrinkles, or at least you feel it does."

From the small mud-hut villages to Mandalay, the Burmese are rehoming the recent "Miss Universe" contest held in Long Beach, Calif. They are delighted that Ma Than Than Aye was entered as "Miss Burma," but still are pondering why she lost out to "Miss Japan."

In the northern village of Kutkai, an army lieutenant came up with a consoling reason. "She (Miss Burma) is too low," he said sadly.

He was depressed by the unusual height of "Miss Japan." "Miss Burma" stands barely five feet, even on tiptoes.

Garlic Flavor
For a mild garlic flavor, prepare two medium-sized summer squash or zucchini this way. Wash vegetables and trim ends.

Slice into 1/4-inch rings. Cook, covered, in a small amount of salted water about 15 to 20 minutes, or until tender. Drain. Add salt and pepper to taste. Add two tablespoons of butter and one peeled garlic clove. Cover and let stand until butter melts. Remove the garlic, stir to coat squash with butter. Serves four.

Daytime TV for the Thinking Woman

By Cynthia Lowry

NEW YORK, Sept. 8 (AP).

LAST MAY CBS MADE a startling discovery which may yet prove to be television-shaking: The thinking woman.

TV had already invented the thinking man, or at least a sponsor had. The distasteful discovery came about when somebody had the idea of putting together a show, called "Woman!" as a sort of taped daytime special dedicated to a thoughtful, literate exploration of the pros and cons of teen-age marriage.

Well, sir, it was presented, with considerable fanfare, on a weekday afternoon spot normally devoted to a covey of soap operas, audience participation games and reruns of "Our Miss Brooks." And when it turned up with fine reviews and even better audience ratings, the folks at CBS were as excited as if they'd discovered the wheel.

Now a number of "Woman!" specials are in the works, the first of which is dedicated to the question "Is the American Woman Losing Her Femininity?" It will dislodge a marriage counseling program, "For Better or Worse," and Art Linkletter's "House Party" on Thursday, Sept. 17 (1-2 p.m. St. Louis time) if, in turn, Soviet Premier Khrushchev's visit doesn't postpone it.

While the question itself is one which has been thoroughly explored in book, magazine and newspaper form, it remains stimulating and controversial. CBS has brought in Esther Williams to preside over the discussion—a rather inspired selection. The slim, pretty film star is, in her own right, a dramatic example of this particular "Woman!" question.

Esther started out as a champion swimmer, moved up to become a big box-office film star and, while still keeping up with a theatrical career, is the working president of a successful swimming pool manufacturing company. She is also the mother of three children—and informs you graciously but firmly: "I am one of the most feminine women in the world!" In today's wrap up the final details of the show, Miss Williams insists that while there can be no definite answer to the question raised by the show, it surely will produce interesting dinner-table conversation in a lot of American homes that night.

"I say yes to the question—if you mean the old Victorian idea of woman. But I say no, if you mean a human being fulfilling herself. Each of us must choose a definition of femininity that is true to ourselves and our lives," is Miss Williams' conclusion.

Anyway, it will be a change from worrying about whether Bill will ever walk again and Claudia's amnesia.

Attracting Songbirds To Farm

By Leonard Hall

THE OLD FARM HOUSE at Possum Trot faces square with the compass, its front door set toward the south. But the porch, where we do a lot of living, looks toward the sunrise and sunset. These are our best views, so that we always are mildly torn as to where we shall eat breakfast and supper. Luncheon is a small meal and is eaten on whichever side is shaded at noon. But for the others we must decide whether the mist rising from Saline creek valley to the east, or the sun gradually lighting up the distant hills to westward, will set the best mood for the day. And in evening, is it the actual sunset beyond this distant western horizon or the dying light in the deep hollows on old Buford to the east that will best wipe away the day's cares?

Right now, as summer shifts imperceptibly to autumn, the west porch is our favorite. The hour is generally about 5:30 to allow plenty of time for that third cup of coffee, and there is a tremendous activity of songbirds in the yard which makes the hour doubly interesting. In the 15 years we have lived at Possum Trot many shrubs and trees have been added to the plantings around the house and these are paying off today not only by attracting more birds but by bringing in more species. Also, in these early days of September, the young birds have matured but whole families are still together, or else many of our songsters have started to gather for the migration.

Although there is never a time from daylight on when the voice of some songster cannot be heard, this singing is intermittent and casual as compared with that of early summer. There may be as many as a dozen mockingbirds in the yard, some playing along the cedar fence and some chasing the smaller birds through the shrubbery but without any real ill-will. Only now and then does one stop to sing a few notes. The same is true of bluebirds which come in family flocks of four and five to perch on the fence or the wires; you will hear their cheerful little note a dozen times a day but never for more than a minute or two at a time. Others that spend a lot of time close to the house are phoebe and summer tanager, Carolina and Bewick wrens, brown thrashers, hummingbirds, cardinals and an occasional indigo bunting, chipping and field sparrow.

THERE IS little doubt that all of these birds could find other quarters in the fields and wood close to the house that are just as comfortable. But we do provide them with things the songbirds like—food, water and good cover—and these species all seem to have a broad tolerance, if not an actual liking, for human beings. When the migration takes them south, we will miss them. But then other travelers from the north will join our local birds which winter here and we will have the pleasure of watching them throughout the cold months.

I can think of few hobbies as inexpensive and pleasant as attracting the songbirds. And here in Missouri, where we have one of the richest floras on the North American continent, there are almost countless native shrubs and vines that are not only decorative but are especially suited to providing food and cover for our birds. Generally speaking, it seems to me that our nurseries have missed a bet here by not domesticating and developing some of these "natives." This doesn't mean that the nursery cannot offer plants to help attract birds, but too often they compromise on foundation and yard plantings of exotic evergreens that do little except break up harsh building lines and provide a bit of color.

ONE OF THE MOST ATTRACTIVE of the native shrubs and one that is extremely hardy and easy to transplant is the rough-leaved dogwood, Cornus asperifolia. This is the latest-blooming member of the family and has a more shrubby growth than the flowering dogwood, although it may get to 30 feet in height. Its blossoms are in clusters at the tips of the twigs, very handsome when they open in June. And the white berries which appear later are relished by songbirds of every kind. We have several of these rough-leaved dogwoods in the yard that bore a huge crop of fruit and already every berry down to the last one has been harvested. There are other dogwoods that also deserve consideration; the alternate-leaved, gray and swamp varieties are among these.

There are several native viburnums that make decorative small trees, but our favorite is the black haw, Viburnum prunifolium. This grows slowly to about 24 feet in height, can be kept pruned in tree form, and has mildly sweet fruits that turn from frosty blue to black and are enjoyed by all birds, small furbearers, and country boys. Black haw has round, shiny leaves and makes a handsome ornamental more widely used in Europe than in its home country of America. Yellow buckthorn or Rhamnus Caroliniana is another badly neglected native small tree or shrub. Its ornamental quality in spring and summer depends on the shiny green foliage, for the flowers come late and are tiny, though much loved by the honeybees. Buckthorn holds its leaves until mid-winter, however, and has a fine crop of berries that turn from red to blue to dark purple and are used by all the songbirds.

Other natives that deserve a chance in the plantings around our homes and do well in attracting wildlife are deciduous holly, redbud, wafer ash, hazelnut and bittersweet, while if you have an odd corner or two not formally gardened, the elderberry and poke weed both bear heavy crops of fruit attractive to the songbirds. A problem, of course, is to find a nursery that grows these species or a land owner who will give you permission to dig them.

Salt Pillar to the Moon

By Ramon Coffman

I HAVE JUST learned an interesting fact. There is enough salt in one ocean to make a pillar which would reach to the moon!

I have chosen the Atlantic, the second largest ocean, for this project in figuring. It has a surface area of 31,000,000 square miles, without counting various gulfs and bays.

The average depth of the Atlantic is about two and a half miles, and it contains about 87,000,000 cubic miles of water. That water has about 3 1/2 per cent of salt.

When we multiply the amount of salt in a cubic mile by the number of cubic miles of water, we reach an enormous figure. The Atlantic ocean contains close to 3,000,000 cubic miles of salt.

If we could use all that salt in building a pillar three and a half miles wide on each side, the height would be almost a quarter of a million miles.

There would be a bit of trouble. To remove all the salt from the Atlantic would take too long. If we could rear the pillar to a height of 10 or 15 miles, it probably would topple down.

Nevertheless the Atlantic ocean has enough salt for such a pillar, and the Pacific has twice as much as the Atlantic. The Indian ocean and the Arctic ocean, together, have about the same amount of salt as the Atlantic.

Cracks in concrete. Cracks in concrete surfaces that must be repaired so that they are absolutely watertight can be fixed by filling the joint with hot tar or hot asphalt. These are even effective when the concrete slab serves as a roof for some area below.

Television Preview

TUESDAY'S top television shows as previewed and selected by TV Key's staff:

Miss America Preview Parade. Though the finals in the "Miss America" contest is an annual TV affair, tonight's half hour is the television debut of the young hopefuls as they take their first official steps in the gala and "arduous" week of events. From the vantage point of a front-line boardwalk viewer (estimated at 250,000), the TV audience can see the parade of floats with each contestant elegantly gowned and representing her own state. Choose your own winner, if you like, before the finals on Saturday, 7 p.m. KMOX-TV.

Tightrope. (Premiere). New series on an undercover cop gets off to an active start in a race-track robbery. Cop Mike Connors joins the gang in the robbery plans and then tips off his men. The pace in the opener is fairly snappy, and the story idea should please horse-racing fans. 8 p.m., KMOX-TV.

Andy Williams. Nice, gay feeling pervades Andy's show tonight. Introduction finds his crew popping out from behind their giant "sevens" for "This Is My Lucky Day"; the real Jim Backus brings on the incredible Mr. Magoo; Dorothy Collins and Andy repeat their infectious little game, picking out tunes when the other leaves off; and Kay Ballard is fun in a ditty called "The Mirror." For his LP segment, Andy listens to the sounds of a coal delivery, sings "Mack the Knife," and turns on "Music for Frustrated Conductors" for his dancers. Outside of a solo from Leslie Uggams and a duet from her and Andy to "Inchworm," the cast reveals in a medley of all kinds of "lary"-type tunes. 9 p.m., KMOX-TV.

Jack Parr Show. Jack takes over again, bridging last night's pinch-hitter, Joey Bishop, along. Cue bit has Hermione Gingold, Jose Melis and Harry Mimmo in a wild skit, aping the Berlitz people; Paar tangles with a "relative," Anita Bryant sings, and Harry Mimmo goes into one of his dance-pantomimes, woolly and mad as usual. 11 p.m., KSD-TV.

PRINTED PATTERN

Sew-easy—just two main pattern parts. Choose scooped or high, round neckline—crepe, cotton, or jersey.
